Princess film row peaks tonight

By TOM JORY

NEW YORK (AP) — Is Death of a Princess "a completely false picture of the life, religion, customs and traditions of Saudi Arabia," as that country's government claims, or is the film "a sensitive and thoughtful exploration of the Arab dilemma," as its producers maintain?

The Public Broadcasting Service insists the right to answer that question belongs to the viewer and will show Death of a Princess tonight (Ch.9 at 8 p.m.) despite pressure from the U.S. state department and one of the system's major underwriters, the Mobil Corp.

One consequence already is clear: Death of a Princess has affected U.S. relations with a foreign government like no previous television production.

PBS will follow the two-hour film with a six-minute documentary on the controversy, as well as an hour-long panel discussion on the issues raised by the film.

The film is about Saudi Arabian Princess Mish'al and her commoner lover who were publicly executed on July 15, 1977, in a parking lot in Jidda. The 19-year-old princess was shot to death and her companion hacked with a sword.

They had been accused of adultery, and the execution was ordered by the princess' grandfather, a powerful member of the royal family. The princess was given an opportunity to deny the adultery, but refused to do so.

British film-maker Antony Thomas learned of the execution four months later during an after-dinner conversation. He was intrigued and initially considered a dramatization based on the execution.

After several months' work in England and the Middle East, Thomas decided to produce instead a film detailing his search for facts behind the sensational story.

Actors were hired to portray Thomas, who is called Christopher Ryder in the film, the princess and other figures. Thomas said all interviews were faithfully transcribed for the film and all facts were checked several times.

After the film was broadcast April 10 in England, Saudi Arabia expelled Britain's ambassador. As the date for the PBS presentation approached, the Saudis expressed their concern in a letter to Warren Christopher, acting U.S. state secretary.

Christopher passed the communication on to Lawrence Grossman, PBS' president, urging the non-commercial, government-supported network "give appropriate consideration to the sensitive religious and cultural issues involved."

Mobil, which will spend nearly $2.5 million on programs for public television in 1980, entered the controversy with an advertisement in several major newspapers suggesting PBS "review its decision to run the film." Mobil is one of four owners of Arabian American Oil Co., which produces nearly 75 per cent of Saudi Arabia's daily output.

Death of a Princess scene

Brigade ambushes police foe

VENICE (Reuter) — The chief of the Venice anti-terrorist squad was ambushed and fatally shot on his way to work today and the Red Brigade urban guerrilla group later claimed responsibility.

Alfredo Albanese, 33, was gunned down by at least two people who fired more than 15 shots after stopping his car at a street crossing, police said.

Hit in the head, stomach and legs, Albanese died minutes later in a hospital. He was the 21st victim of urban guerrilla violence in Italy this year.

Two hours after the attack, an anonymous telephone caller told the Venice daily Il Gazzettino: "Red Brigades speaking, we take responsibility for the ambush of the Digos chief."

Digos is the political section of the Italian police whose anti-terrorist squads have arrested at least 70 guerrilla suspects.

Today's killing, the first in almost two months, shattered police hopes that their recent raids and arrests had broken the spine of Italy's vast urban guerrilla network.

Fire rages at Kitimat

Times New Services

Ironically, the fuel was earmarked for Eurocan Pulp and Paper Company's firefighting equipment.

Larry Beitz, the company's industrial relations supervisor, told the Times the fuel was ignited by shortcircuited electrical wiring in the pumphouse.

The unidentified ship, accompanied by a tug, was being escorted into the deep-sea port 120 kilometres southeast of Prince Rupert when the mishap occurred.

The ship stayed to help fight the blaze when the lumber facing of the 300-foot-long dock caught fire, Beitz said.

But flames soon enveloped the whole dock and forced the freighter to retreat.

Extent of damage to the ship was not known.

All available firefighting equipment was soon at the scene as dense black smoke soared above the dock.

More than 40 professional and volunteer firefighters, the company's own fire crews as well as loggers brought in from the woods, were battling the blaze in a bid to save an adjacent warehouse, Beitz said.

Other facilities on and near the dock include fuel tanks and a log dump. The mill, four or five kilometres away, was not in danger.

No injuries were reported.

The warehouse next to the dock is jammed with kraft and linerboard paper, the mill's two main products.

Several fire trucks were loaded on barges to get closer to flames and a helicopter dumped fire retardant on the dock.

Airborne water tankers were en route to the scene, Beitz said.

"I know one water bomber's already on its way from Abbotsford."

U.S. rates drop again

NEW YORK (AP) — Several U.S. banks cut their prime lending rates to 16½ per cent today and a Cleveland bank cut its rate to 16 per cent as a slide in American interest rates continued.

Ameritrust, the Cleveland bank, dropped to 16 per cent, after Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., the fifth-largest U.S. bank, cut its rate.

Bennett's comments rile French

Times News Services

MONTREAL — B.C.'s Premier Bill Bennett came under attack today by the Federation des Francophones hors Quebec following his address to the Montreal Board of Trade.

Bennett had defended his decision to take part in the constitutional debate in Quebec just days before the referendum by saying "the actions of each member of the Canadian family affect all the other members."

But the federation, an Ottawa-based group fighting for the rights of French-speaking minorities, accused Bennett and other premiers of issuing little more than a plea for the status quo.

"When they're in Quebec," the group said in a written statement, "the premiers of the English-speaking provinces place a great deal of emphasis on economic questions related to the referendum.

"This allows them to avoid the fundamental debate about the principle of two founding peoples and their equal status in any new constitution."

The statement said Quebec has already made a formal commitment to respect the rights of anglophones in that province and that "by refusing to make similar commitments to their French-speaking communities, Mr. Bennett and most of the other provincial premiers are losing all sense of credibility in the current debate about a renewed consitution."

In his speech, Bennett said he was proud of the progress made in B.C. in French-language education.

Bennett said his province is ready to push ahead with constitutional change within Canada and hopes Quebec will do the same.

Federal tax on export gas price of island pipe cash?

By JAKE BANKY

British Columbia is facing a two-edged proposition from the federal government.

If it wants federal aid for a natural gas pipeline to Vancouver Island, it may have to put up with federal taxation of its natural gas exports.

The pipeline and the possible export tax figured prominently in today's discussions between federal Energy Minister Marc Lalonde and B.C. Energy Minister Bob McClelland.

Lalonde is on a round-robin of provincial visits trying to nail down a federal-provincial energy pricing agreement to replace the one which expires July 1. He meets the Alberta energy minister Tuesday.

McClelland told a joint press conference following the meeting B.C. remains as firmly opposed as ever to a federal tax on gas exports.

He refused to discuss the possibility B.C. might have to trade that position in order to get federal aid for the pipeline.

"It is not an either-or proposition. It's a package," he said.

But McClelland would not reveal the components of the package under discussion.

Lalonde said the federal government approves of the gas pipeline and would like to contribute to the project but it is broke.

If the necessary money is not forthcoming in a new oil pricing agreement with Alberta, it must come from somewhere else, he said.

An export tax on natural gas is one possibility.

"It's not a double-edged threat," Lalonde said. "But I'm telling you we've got a $14 billion deficit. We have no money, period, to do anything more than we're doing at the present time.

"There are quite valid new steps to be taken in this country to move away from oil consumption. We would like to contribute and participate in those steps that might be taken by some provincial governments. But in order to do that, we need funds."

Like McClelland, Lalonde would not be pinned down on the options being discussed.

Balloonists cross North America

MATANE, Que. (UPI) — A father-son team plopped their balloon Kitty Hawk into the virgin wilderness of Quebec's Gaspe Peninsula Monday, completing a record, cross-continent odyssey that now has them looking to the frontiers of space.

Maxi Anderson, 48, of Albuquerque, N.M., and his son, Kris, 23, set down the 75-foot-tall helium balloon on a small dot of meadow in dense timberland two miles south of Ste. Felicite on the St. Lawrence River. A Canadian military helicopter blew the balloon away from the trees.

About 14 feet above ground, Kris detonated an explosive to separate the gondola and the bag. The Andersons fell unhurt to the ground but the bag was shredded by trees.

On the five-day, 2,800-mile journey from San Francisco, the adventurers suffered through unbearably cold temperatures and snow that iced the balloon, braved thunderstorms over Wyoming and desperately fought winds trying to carry them far north.

Despite being more than 1,000 miles from their original destination of Kitty Hawk., N.C., Anderson deemed it as great a success as his historic 1978 flight on the Double Eagle Two across the Atlantic from the United States to France.

Having conquered land and water, Anderson now has another dream that will carry him beyond Earth's confines.

"Man always has his dreams and I guess the one that I have . . . is to lead the first mining expedition into space a few years from now,' he said after landing. "Man usually follows where he goes to search for raw materials. Canadians and Americans know that."

Anderson and his son knew Sunday they would never reach their destination at Kitty Hawk, where Wilbur and Orville Wright carried out the first successful heavier-than-air plane flight.

The pair hadn't eaten for two days because of air sickness. the -40 degree Celsius temperatures were almost unbearable.

Maxi Anderson complimented the Canadian pilots for their "beautiful flying" and air traffic controllers for their help in plotting a course. "I had some of the finest help a man could have here — unselfish, eager and competent."

Chrysler's long-term survival still uncertain

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Labor, business and political leaders are cautiously optimistic about the federal loan guarantee package to Chrysler Canada Ltd., but there is concern about the company's chance for long-term survival.

There was agreement that whatever long-term good the government's financial rescue of the ailing automaker will accomplish, Windsor cannot expect a miraculous revitalization of its faltering economy in the near future.

Both the U.S. and Canadian governments have finally said yes to loan guarantees for Chrysler.

After a meeting in Toronto on Saturday, the Canadian government and the Ontario government approved a $210-million loan package, in exchange for Chrysler's promise of more Canadian jobs and construction of a $10-million research and development facility in Ontario.

The Canadian action completed a complex arrangement, involving about 300 financial institutions and two states, which helped Chrysler put together $1.43 billion in private financial support required by Congress for $1.5 million in U.S. loan guarantees.

Acknowledging that Chrysler had met the requirements laid out by Congress, U.S. Treasury Secretary G. William Miller announced in Washington late Saturday that the automaker would get the help it had sought since December.

Chrysler chairman Lee Iacocca says it "signals the first step in a program to beat the foreign imports" and means 500,000 jobs will be saved.

Bob White, Canadian director for the United Auto Workers, praised the efforts of federal Industry Minister Herb Gray in achieving job and investment commitments from Chrysler.

But the federal government must provide immediate assistance for laid-off workers until the auto industry in general picks up, White said.

"People who were contemplating buying a Chrysler may now have some more faith," White said.

Douglas Fraser, president of the United Auto Workers, said the No. 3 North American auto-maker would have gone broke if the loan guarantees were delayed another week.

"It was absolutely essential to Chrysler's survival," Fraser said in Detroit. "In the future you'll see a different corporation that's smaller and has fewer car lines. But the corporation has survived and that's what's important."

About 41,700 of Chrysler's U.S. workers were on indefinite layoff this week, and 4,900 in Canada, although all its U.S. assembly plants were to be operating.

As a sales slump continues, General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co. and American Motors Corp. all have announced further reductions in their production plans for May, the sixth such revision since early March. Chrysler, however, was awaiting the decisions in the U.S. and Canada before making any production changes.

Dorms sought for tourists

The Visitors Information Centre is seeking additional dormitory space as evidence grows Victoria will have a tourist crush this summer.

Some downtown hotel owners report hitting 100 per cent occupancy during several days in April and they are beginning to wonder where the city will put everyone when the peak tourist season begins.

Tour operators report local bookings in April were up 50 to 80 per cent above the same time last year and they are predicting a record season.

VIC president Les Wood said Saturday he is confident the city can handle the overflow.

He said when hotels and motels fill up there will be 1,000 additional rooms available, including 900 in University of Victoria dorms and 100 in private houses.

If this supply is not adequate, additional rooms will be sought in private schools that have dorm facilities.

"We can obtain many more rooms if they are needed," he said.

He hopes tourists won't be discouraged from coming to Victoria this summer because of negative publicity about the hotel room shortage.

While Victorians have to be alerted, he said, it would be counterproductive if the impression got out that the city can't handle the traffic.

"Nobody will have to sleep on the streets this summer. We haven't begun to tap the supply of emergency housing."

preserve of the government of Canada," Bennett said.

"I have said it many times before but let me repeat that my government is fully committed to a wholesale renewal of the Canadian federation with a concerted effort to reform the constitution — and this without delay."

Meanwhile, with eight days of heavy referendum campaigning to go, Quebec Premier Rene Levesque and federalist leader Claude Ryan are spicing their pitches for votes with talk of victory on May 20.

The latest opinion polls put the federalists ahead by three to six percentage points, and Ryan has been predicting a sure, but not necessarily large, victory since last Wednesday.

On Sunday, Levesque replied with a scrappy prediction that the yes side would win by a hair. Then he blasted Ryan for counting votes before they are cast.

Both leaders have avoided detailed comment on poll results, but there is wide public interest in the surveys and their potential effects on how people may vote.

The most recent poll, published Sunday in Dimanche-Matin, has Ryan's federalist forces slightly ahead.

Le Devoir editorialists divided on referendum

MONTREAL (CP) — Three of the four editorial writers at Le Devoir, considered Quebec's most influential French-language newspaper, have endorsed a yes vote in the May 20 referendum on sovereignty-association.

In a stark break with tradition, the morning daily presented no single position and each of the four wrote editorials in today's edition.

Editor-in-chief Michel Roy, alone in defending federalism, wrote that the question is not whether Quebecers want change — because that is already known — but whether they want political sovereignty tied with an economic association with Canada.

The answer, he said, "is no."

Roy said the very fact the government's proposal emphasizes economic association shows "Quebec already recognizes that it needs Canada.

But his colleagues disagreed.

Assistant editor-in-chief Lise Bissonette doubted the possibilities for constitutional reform, saying the federal government has been consistently unwilling to make the major concessions required.

Rebel army brass pull Uganda coup

KAMPALA (AP) — Rebel military officers led by Uganda's army chief of staff claimed control of the East African country today but for the time being let President Godfrey Binaisa keep his title and the presidential residence where Tanzanian troops were protecting him.

An aide said Binaisa was still exercising his presidential powers and was conferring with officials at his residence in Entebbe, on Lake Victoria 33 kilometres from Kampala, the capital.

A spokesman for the rebels led by Brig. David Oyite Ojok said the military commission of the Uganda National Liberation Front, the political coalition that named Binaisa president 11 months ago, "is in charge and in control of the security and stability of the whole nation." He said this meant Binaisa was no longer in charge of national security.

There was speculation Ojok was acting on behalf of former president Milton Obote, a close friend who has been living in exile in Tanzania since Idi Amin ousted him in 1971. Rumors have been circulating for weeks that Ojok, who is believed to command the personal loyalty of a large part of Uganda's 5,000-man army, was planning a coup to return Obote to power.

But Obote denied there was going to be a military coup or that he would accept an invitation from the army to take over.

"I'd rather go to the people," he said.

Obote said earlier he would return to Kampala from Tanzania on May 27 to run against Binaisa in the presidential election later this year.

The military commission appeared to be moving cautiously in its attempt to strip Binaisa of his powers. Some observers believed it was unsure of the reaction from the 10,000 Tanzanian troops who remain in Uganda.

Binaisa on Saturday fired Ojok.

Money Talk

A series in which Montreal Trust answers your questions.

"Protecting my children from capital gains tax."

"I am a widower with three teenage children. I understand that on my death, capital gains will affect my estate assets before the bulk of my estate can be set up to protect my children. What can I do now to ensure my executors can identify the tax position?"

First, list your assets in detail. Your financial advisor or trust officer could assist you in this.

Once you've done that, you should try to find out the original purchase price, although for people who didn't initially make the purchase, this is often difficult to ascertain.

Next, it would help to know the Valuation Day value of these assets. This is not hard to establish for stocks listed on the Stock Exchange, but for many other assets, it may require professional appraisal.

Monthly or daily interest savings.

"I regularly put $500 away on the 15th of every month. I occasionally make withdrawals, but usually on the same day and never more than $100 at a time. Do you think I'd be better off with a daily interest savings account?"

In order to calculate this, we'd need to know precise details of the amounts, dates, and interest rates involved.

But it's just this kind of question that gave us the incentive to redesign our Montreal Trust Plus Savings Account. Now with this account, we calculate the interest both ways, monthly and daily, and credit you with whichever amount works out higher.

It seems logical, but as far as we know, we're the only financial institution in Canada offering this service.

If you have any questions about our services, write, call, or come in and see us at the address below.

Vancouver luring L.A. recording artists north

By MARGOT SINCLAIR

VANCOUVER (CP) — A volcano of musical talent here is ready to explode, but spewing hot wax instead of lava.

Several recording studios have no time available until after August. Local bands are breaking into the national and international music scenes. A million-dollar recording studio has just been built and two more are being designed.

Los Angeles artists are eyeing Vancouver "to do something different; to have a different atmosphere," says George McNeill, owner of the new Water Street Sound and Filmworks Inc.

The devalued Canadian dollar and tax breaks make it attractive for a U.S. or European recording artist to come to Canada, he says.

And Vancouver is in the same time zone as Los Angeles, so musicians come here because time — and money — is not wasted.

Bob Brooks, general manager of Little Mountain Sound Co. Ltd., a production house and recording studio owned by the famous Griffiths-Gibson Productions Ltd. and Western Broadcasting Co. Ltd., says more than climate attracts international acts.

"Let's forget the (dollar) exchange, and let's forget the better tax structure in Canada — people don't forget those things — but some people don't want the L.A. sound, they're tired of it. We have our own sound.

"We used to have our own sound and it was rotten. Now it's a Vancouver record because they can really hear it."

But Geoff Turner of Pinewood Recording Studios Ltd. says there is no boom in the West Coast recording industry, just natural growth.

Americans don't often record in Vancouver and Canadians usually record in the U.S., he says. But he is trying to stop that by providing good quality sound.

Born in England, Turner spent 10 years working at more than 200 New York recording studios before he grew tired of the U.S. music scene.

Other experienced technicians moved north for the same reasons, he says, and as the product improved, word spread about Vancouver's facilities, more people came north, and the Vancouver music scene started.

More recording studios are being built, and competition is becoming fierce, but this makes Brooks happy.

"Studios that come in will spend big dollars, bring in good equipment and put people to work."

Twin fences rushed for Agassiz prison

AGASSIZ (CP) — The federal government will spend 1.1 million dollars on an emergency basis to improve perimeter security around Agassiz Mountain Prison in this Fraser Valley community east of Vancouver, Solicitor-General Bob Kaplan said Saturday.

Kaplan made the announcement after meeting mayors of Fraser Valley communities in which residents had complained of a recent killing.

Agassiz postmaster Malcolm Nelson was stabbed to death. A prisoner who had escaped the instition has been charged with second-degree murder in the incident.

Kaplan said he also told the mayors there will be no expansion at the nearby Kent institution until completion of an independent community impact study. In addition, the mayors got Kaplan's assurance that there will be no substantial increase in the prisoner population at Agassiz for five years.

New security measures at Agassiz Mountain Prison will include two 4.5-metre fences, improved perimeter lighting, new gate houses and a road around the institution.

Kaplan said his department and local RCMP also have worked out iron-clad procedures for alerting the community, particularly schools, after an escape.

Meanwhile, in New Westminster, federal prison officials said they considered staging a real blast to officially close the 102-year-old B.C. Penitentiary on Saturday.

Jack Stewart, spokesman for the Canadian Pentitentiary Service, said authorities considered detonating a small charge to blow away the infamous prison's main gates but dropped the idea for a quieter, more conventional ceremony.

Stewart said the idea was to emphasize the finality of closing the jail, overlooking the Fraser River in this city south of Vancouver.

There was no further official comment on the plan or explanation why it was dropped, but penitentiary guards said the gate blasting got more than casual consideration.

Officials also considered having Solicitor-General Robert Kaplan ring a bronze bell inside the prison yard three times. However, the closure was marked by a brief speech by Kaplan.

The Solicitor-General said Canada is moving away from locking people up in prisons.

Self-built speed bumps solve, create problems

DELTA (CP) — Drag racers who used to roar gleefully past Gerry Baker's house now find the same piece of pavement sets their molars rattling.

Baker got tired of speedsters zooming down his street in the municipality south of Vancouver, endangering his two young sons, so last Wednesday he called in a paving crew, who built two neat speed bumps at either end of a two-block long strip.

Baker painted the bumps white, and erected two official-looking warning signs.

The bumps worked beautifully, but municipal officials were chagrined.

"The bylaw enforcement fellow called," Baker said. "He was so mad he could barely talk. He said he couldn't believe that I had had the gall to do such a thing."

Then came the police.

"They were very understanding, but they have a job to do. They said they were supposed to issue me a writ but would hold off to see if I would remove the bumps."

Baker said he considered destroying them, but, encouraged by neighbors, decided they should stay.

"I know there is now a work order out in the engineering department. And I guess they'll bill me for the work."

The bumps and signs cost him $320.

If the bumps are removed, Baker said, he will "go through channels" to the municipality's traffic control committee.

But if that doesn't work, "I'll build another bump."

Mechanics back deal

VANCOUVER (CP) — Unionized Vancouver-area mechanics voted Sunday to accept the latest contract offer from auto dealers.

The mechanics, members of automotive Lodge 1857 of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, voted 69 per cent to accept a two-year contract.

Under terms of the agreement, partsmen will get an immediate 17-per-cent wage increase in the first year and 10.8 per cent in the second year, including a cost-of-living adjustment.

All other workers get a 15.5-per-cent raise in the first year and 10 per cent in the final year.

Smith's view

VANCOUVER (CP) — Despite declining enrolment, breakdown of the traditional family unit and a low birth rate, B.C.'s schools and colleges have an optimistic future, says Education Minister Brian Smith.

"We've had a major revolution in education and that revolution has had to do with business education," Smith told the B.C. Business Educators Association annual convention Saturday.

Costly vote

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Each vote cast cost almost $7 (total of $8,300) in a school board byelection that officials in this southern Interior city say had the worst voter turnout in 30 years.

Only 1,208 of the 25,503 eligible voters, about three per cent, cast their ballots Saturday, electing Russ Gerard as trustee for seven months.

Peculiar reaction

Reaction to the federal report on the standards of health care in Alert Bay has been discouraging.

Instead of using the dismal findings of inquiry commissioner Dr. Gary Goldthorpe as the basis for improvements, authorities have spent their time trying to discredit his work and defend their own.

The College of Physicians and Surgeons defended its previous examination of the conduct and competence of Dr. Jack Pickup, the village's only full-time physician. It complained that Goldthorpe did not provide enough evidence to back up his criticisms of Pickup.

Health Minister Rafe Mair echoed this position, and used the report as an opportunity for a little federal-provincial politicking about jurisdiction for health care on Indian lands.

The most peculiar reaction came from the Board of Trustees of St. George's Hospital, the village's only hospital.

The board branded Goldthorpe's report as divisive and unproductive, deepening the rift between natives and whites in the community. In a statement, trustees said:

"His continual references to two communities and his deliberately pointing up the differences in culture cannot but aggravate the existing problem."

The board has missed the point. Goldthorpe found the overall life of Alert Bay natives, including the community divisions and the cultural differences, to be a key factor in the low health standards of the band.

That will not go away just because it is ignored. Indeed, Goldthorpe found it had been ignored for far too long. It is the situation that is causing the problem, not the comments about situation.

Goldthorpe was asked to report on the conditions at Alert Bay as he found it. He did that, frankly and straightforwardly.

But his work will be of benefit to the community only if all factions involved are willing to accept the reality of that situation and change it.

Heavy-handed

Sidney alderman Ben Ethier deserves an apology from town council and the local RCMP constabulary.

For writing a 12-page essay on certain rights afforded individuals and police officers under the law and submitting it to one of Sidney's two weekly newspapers, Ethier was subjected to a form of inappropriate coercion designed to have him withdraw his article.

First, it should be noted that he did nothing more than write and submit the article; the newspaper made the decision to print it.

The Peninsula Free Press decided to use Ethier's essay as a series. But after the first installment was published, Ethier was called to a special meeting of council. The only purpose of the meeting was to deal with the article, but Ethier says he says he didn't know that when he was invited.

The RCMP expressed concern that such articles would make policing more difficult and that more police officers would be needed if the articles continued. Council was worried that people might read only part of the series and that would lead to misunderstanding. He was accused of inaccuracy and told that questions of law could not be dealt with adequately in the media.

Anyone, RCMP officers and aldermen included, has a right to express concern or complaint about any newspaper article. Recourse to the courts is also possible if the article is defamatory.

Letters-to-the-editor, informal discussions with the author or even an another newspaper article looking at the question from a different viewpoint would have been a sensible approach in this situation.

But it was heavy-handed to bring the author, in this case an alderman, before the RCMP and his fellow councillors, proceed to question his competence to write about the law (he had the article checked by a lawyer) and then hang the possibility of increased municipal policing costs on his head.

Perhaps Ethier's next article should be about the rights of citizens, including aldermen, to express their views in print.

Stonewalling in the Senate

OTTAWA — The staid Senate has begun seething with frustration amid charges that the three Liberal cabinet ministers who sit in the ornate chamber are frequently absent and dodging routine questions.

On Monday, Tory members worked themselves up to such a pitch that they actually tried to adjourn the traditional question period. Inquiries are tinged with bitterness about the slowness and shallowness of replies. And the Conservatives talk longingly now about the good old days when they were in power and when the question period occasionally reached the thrust-and-parry of its Commons counterpart.

Western reps

The three senators are Minister of State for Economic Development Bud Olson, Government Leader Ray Perrault and Minister of State for the Wheat Board Hazen Argue. Together they represent the West. Individually, two of the three have little clout and thus few responsibilities. The third, Olson, may be chairman of the cabinet's economic development committee but he has shrewdly managed to leave the impression that he must scurry to more senior ministers for answers to the most routine questions. And nobody — with the possible exception of Argue — seems to go much out of his way to try.

So three or four days a week, the senators launch their traditional attack and the questioner is usually told that the question will be taken on notice and answered after the reply is fetched from the powerful Commons minister.

"What we get is mostly doubletalk and gobbledegook," fumes Newfoundland Tory Senator William Doody, a former provincial cabinet minister. "It's an exercise in futility.

"I don't expect to get an immediate answer on some technical question but then I also don't expect — when the information does come back — to get a lecture on economic theory.

"We could make a pretty good contribution. Perhaps if there was some media coverage the cabinet ministers might be under some pressure to come up with some answers."

Another Tory senator, Manitoba's Nathan Nurgitz, says "the mood's a touch nasty right now.

"We don't need all kinds of gibberish in our answers about (Prime Minister Pierre) Trudeau being the greatest man in the land — we need genuine answers," he says. "And surely to goodness they don't need to put so many questions on notice — they sit in the cabinet and they ought to know something beyond their immediate responsibilities.

"Olson, for example, was a persistent questioner in the last Parliament. I had the highest regard for him. Now he seems to be stonewalling and it's frustrating."

Part of the problem seems to stem from a comparison with the last session when the Senate contained two powerful ministers, Economic Development czar Bob de Cotret and Justice Minister Jacques Flynn. The Liberals peppered de Cotret and Flynn and the answers were often elaborate and political.

It was a Senate high point. The 11 fledgling Tory senators revelled in the proceedings. Their new Liberal cabinet folks are, however, a tad more circumspect.

Tory researchers have discovered that during the first 10 days of the last Parliament, 68 per cent of the questions taken on notice had been answered compared to 48 per cent in this Parliament. Former government leader Flynn had answered 21 out of his 25 inquiries while Perrault has replied to only 19 out of 38. And during the first 11 sitting days (from April 15 to last Tuesday) the three Tory ministers in the Senate had only six absences in total while the Liberals have chalked up nine.

Argue's executive assistant counters that his minister has only two outstanding questions on notice: A querry about potatoes and a Liberal senator's question about the cost of Western wheat production. "He's answered all the questions put to him." An aide to Senator Perrault said Thursday that the leader is still out West on business: "It hasn't been a custom in the past for leaders to give answers off the top — perhaps it's a ploy to embarrass him."

The situation erupted last Monday when the Western trio was ensconced in British Columbia for economic development meetings and a state dinner with the Japanese prime minister. The question period kicked off with the now familiar litany of complaints about the slowness and quality of answers.

Deputy government Senate leader Royce Frith took at least seven questions in a row on notice. Then Tory Senator Robert Muir exploded: "If we are going to sit here all night and ask questions and some Charlie McCarthy just stands up and plays a record saying 'I'll take it as notice; I'll take it as notice,' it would be just as well if we adjourned." Another exasperated Tory later moved an adjournment motion that was defeated by the Liberal majority.

A longtime senior Senate aide says that at least half of the problem lies with the Tories who expected the unusual situation with several senior cabinet ministers to continue. He recalls previous Parliaments when the government leader was the sole cabinet member and when nearly every question was taken on notice.

"It worked better with de Cotret because the Liberals directed questions to his responsibilities," he says. "But the Tories ask too much — on foreign affairs, for example — and they expect immediate answers.

"I understand their frustration but they should all get together and organize so that their questions are shorter and concentrate on one subject."

Single subject

Senator Flynn — who also remembers the days of one minister — agrees that his caucus should perhaps concentrate more on one subject each day.

"But sometimes I have the feeling that it's hardly worth the trouble," he sighs. "On the whole, I don't think that they are providing answers in the same way (as the Tory senators)."

The final answer perhaps lies in the records. On Wednesday, April 16, the trio of Liberal ministers took eight questions on notice. Only two questions were fully answered — by Argue. Olson gave a vague response on mortgage aid — which appeared to contrast with Commons replies — and then he skated around inquiries on the Chrysler and Ford situation, even though part of the Ford answer had already been tabled in the Ontario legislature. Perrault replied to his chief questioner by quoting copiously and reverently from Trudeau's day-old speech to the Commons.

Victoria Landmarks

Victoria's five new government buildings erected on James Bay's south shore in 1859 included Law Office, Legislative Council Court, Colonial Office, Supreme Court and Treasury.

Scoffing Victorians spoke of Dutch Toy, Chinese pagoda, Swiss cottage and Italian villa, and finally dubbed the group "The Birdcages."

Tha Assembly met in the Court House in 1860, and in 1861 an 800-foot bridge was built across the waters of James Bay which extended eastward almost to where the still existing Reformed Episcopal Church (the Church of Our Lord) would be built in 1874.

The 1878 and 1889 bird's-eye views of Victria show the bay, the church, the bridge linking Government Street to the south shore, Belleville Street, and, east of the buildings, Bird Cage Walk.

Nowadays, the outbound Beacon Hill bus, on Government from Belleville to Superior follows the former Bird Cage Walk. On Superior it passes the Stop-of-Interest plaque "The Birdcages."

This plaque, set behind the Parliament Buildings, states in part that the Birdcages were replaced by the present buildings in 1898, that the original legislative hall was preserved until destroyed by fire in 1957.

Margaret A. Ormsby's British Columbia: a History has two pertinent, charming, nineteenth century pictures of bridge and Birdcages.

Muskie waves a white flag

WASHINGTON — Ed Muskie was confirmed by the Senate as secretary of state quicker than you could say "Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini." He should have been pinched for speeding.

But there may be a lesson in this on how to ease the struggle between the Congress and the White House on the conduct of United States foreign policy.

If any of the other candidates mentioned for this job had been nominated, there would undoubtedly have been a prolonged examination of their views. But Big Ed has the trust of the Senate, so he skipped through with only two dissenting votes, and he confirmed the general confidence in him by delivering a most amusing and graceful acceptance speech.

Internal problems

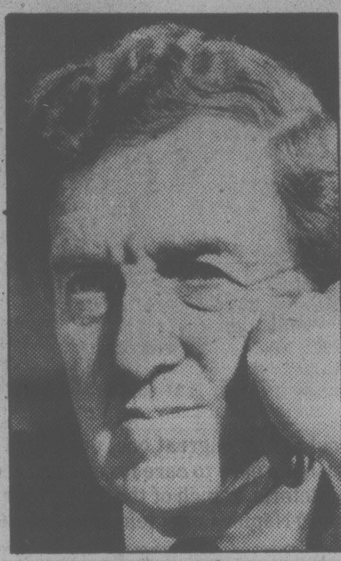
Outside of the crisis over the nation's economy, few problems in this city are more troubling these days than that of reaching some kind of understanding between the executive and legislative branches on our relations with other countries.

Congress reacted aggressively after Vietnam and Watergate, feeling it had allowed presidential power to get beyond control, and insisting on regaining influence over the nation's overseas policy. But in recent years, its demands, some good and some bad, have confused and weakened the president's conduct of foreign affairs. The result has been that the world has been getting conflicting signals from Washington.

President Carter's appointment of Muskie as secretary of state was clearly intended to compose these differences. Franklin Roosevelt did the same thing when he nominated Cordell Hull. And President Truman had the same objective when he drafted Jimmy Byrnes into State.

Ed Muskie is intelligent but modest, with respect for the presidency and the Senate. And for himself. He will take his time and hold his temper, which will not be easy, but he is not the sort to be trifled with.

This Muskie truce between the president and Congress recalls two laws by a couple of Irishmen. There is, of course, "Murphy's Law," which has tended to dominate White House-Congressional relations: "If anything can go wrong, it will." Then there's "Moynihan's Law," named for Pat Moynihan, the not-so-junior senator from New York. His law is: "If you can't lick 'em, join 'em."



ED MUSKIE
. . . respected by Congress

Nobody has ever accused Pat Moynihan of trying to avoid a fight, but he has come to the conclusion that the alley brawl between White House and Congress has gone a bit too far. He is the last of the letter-writers in this town, and I have a document in his own hand proposing a solution.

"The Cabinet," he writes, "has become filled with persons at once too powerful and too weak — invincible one day, dismissed and invisible the next.

"My thought is that the time is at hand to involve the Legislative with the Executive, and that this could be done by the practice of appointing members of the House and Senate to the Cabinet ... The essence of the problem, clearly, was the constitutional decision to separate the Executive from the Legislative in a way not found in any other government.

"The President (by appointing members of Congress to his Cabinet) would have the advantage of devising legislative proposals that would be seen by Congress as partly legislative in origin, and the president's proposals would have advocates in the committees and on the floor.

Compromise

"Thus, the President would not too readily make Congress his target — lest his Cabinet or much of it resign. Congress would not have quite the same casualness about thwarting the president, for the interests of important members would be involved ..."

Of course, Moynihan is proposing that members of Congress might retain their seats on Capitol Hill while serving in the Cabinet, which would require a constitutional amendment. Pat — no halfway guy — is going well beyond Carter's appointment of Muskie. But the president, who has been fussing with Congress ever since he came to town, is moving a little closer to "Moynihan's Law." Not being able to lick the elders on Capitol Hill, he is trying to join them, and Big Ed is his appointed peacemaker at home and abroad.

Help the police

Like the late Will Rogers, most of what I know is from the newspapers. On May 2 you told the story of the authorities' inability to cope with the influx of downtown vagabonds, vandals and drunks. Then on May 3 I saw where a policeman was sent to jail following a case regarding an altercation with a client. So at last someone is going to jail which in itself is some sort of accomplishment. The only trouble is I'm wondering if it's the wrong man. One of Charles Dickens' characters made a curt observation regarding the law years ago. I doubt he would have reason to change his opinion if he could observe the present day scene.

This city used to be a fine town. The old-fashioned homey downtown area had an atmosphere never encountered in any other that I have seen in North America. This has been changing all too rapidly and now the harbor and downtown sections abound with unsavory characters. Some of the beggers might be tolerated if they would clean up their acts and show a little courtesy. Much more sinister are the strong-arm artists who attack and rob. Their victims are sometimes seriously injured.

It's the majority who call the shots, or so I've been told over the years. Perhaps that majority is content to tolerate such conditions. If that is really the case then so be it. But I don't think so and I note that some groups of business people are wise enough to see the impending danger and give fair warning. They know the wisdom of favorably impressing the many tourists on whom this town largely depends. They know, too, that bad news travels fast and tourist letters to the paper bear this out.

Now don't get me wrong. I am not down on anyone because he or she is indigent because I'm old enough to have gone through the Depression. Years ago there were a few vagrants here but most carried an air of some respectability. It is the new over-zealous group that turns me off in a hurry. Nowadays there are agencies which can be called on by those who are truly deserving and destitute.

So let's get with it, Victoria. If you are really concerned then tell the officials, both elected and appointed. They will get the message if enough people complain. If the current laws and ordinances are no longer valid then have them brought up-to-date to fit the situation. And let the chief of police and enforcement officers know that you are behind them so they feel free to do their job. Make it a point to become familiar with some of their more pressing problems. After all, it is they who are trying to protect the members of our shaky society. You'd hardly know it, though, judging by the scant consideration they generally are accorded. — G. A. Whitehead, 809-225 Belleville Steet.

Saving energy?

Recently I had reason to go to the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources' main office building at 580 Booth Street in Ottawa. On leaving the building, as I walked past the electrically-operated flagpoles — Yes, dear fellowtaxpayers, the department that spends our money on advertisements telling us to save energy, has electrically-operated flagpoles. Two of them. And if some enterprising member of the Opposition in Ottawa should get the Minister of Supply and Services in Ottawa to tell the House of Commons how much they cost to install, some of us would have a fit.

Anyway, to resume: as I walked by, I saw parked in the space allotted for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, an enormous Lincoln Continental. Of course, enormous is the only size Lincoln Continentals come in. They are also, according to figures released by the minister's own department, one of the worst gas-guzzling pieces of transportation ironmongery one could buy.

It seems to me that the minister of energy could set a better example for us common plebes and working stiffs, whose tax money is being spent to subsidize gasoline prices. Pious messges on energy conservation, oversized gas guzzlers and electrical flagpoles is a combination that adds up to cynicism. — C. Alexander Brown, Ottawa.

A word of advice to the generals

By JOHN J. FIALKA

WASHINGTON — Here is one scenario of an American hostage rescue in Iran that is not a Pentagon secret:

After weeks of delicate negotiation, the Iranian rulers agree to let a U.S. peace delegation land at Tehran's main airport. Air Force One, flown by two volunteer CIA pilots, arrives.

Then the Iranians are told that the plane is really a large neutron bomb. It is set to go off in 48 hours unless the American hostages are released.

Defense spokesman say that since the aborted raid on Tehran, more than 300 letters have arrived — more unsolicited advice than any military incident in recent history. At least that many more are expected when the White House turns over its raid-related mail to the Pentagon for response.

Brown, who receives a sampling of the mail each day, finds that some of it is flattering, sent by people who are glad the United States finally tried a military solution. A lot of it is angry, written out of frustration over the mechanical and human failures of the raid.

And some of it is strategic, like the neutron bomb idea sent in by a Canadian writer. There are a number of people trying to tell Brown that there must be a better way.

Some examples:

— A New Haven, Conn., man envisions a clandestine force that places radio-controlled incendiary devices in office buildings, homes and apartments in cities all over Iran. A few, placed in relatively harmless places, "such as in forests," are then set off by satellite to demonstrate U.S. power to burn down much of Iran at will.

— A Millburn, N.J., man would have an elite group of 100 CIA agents start a worldwide effort to kidnap prominent Iranians. After each kidnapping, a hitherto unheard of Moslem religious sect would claim responsibility. Iranians would suspect U.S. involvement, but State Department spokesman Hodding Carter would flatly deny it.

"Although not the most reflective of American ideals," the author notes, the plan would "achieve the desired effect: the hostages would be released."

— A resident of a trailer park in California sets forth an elaborate international scheme in which the United States trades a "super magnet" to the Soviet Union in exchange for "some of their sleeping gas that they used on the Afghans." The gas is turned over to Israeli commandos who are paid "$100,000 per man to do the complete job for us."

In its methodical way, the Pentagon has categorized the letters. There are 145 that are regarded as being "pro." In the "con" category are 77. Another 106 are regarded as involving only "general comment."

A careful reading of the letters, however, reveals that Brown can take little comfort from most of the letters. For example, here is one from an accountant in Stockton, Calif., that found its way into the "pro" pile:

"You do have my sympathy, but not too much of it because you have allowed doddering, flattering, hesitating, vacillating people into your administration and into your military machine."

Some of the letters criticizing Brown are rather direct: "To make the decision to go, to go with so damned little and to wreck three helicopters in the process and to lose one plane and one copter and eight lives shows you have only marshmallows in your head," wrote a man from Columbia, S.C.

Still others support Brown, but find other targets for their wrath. "Dont let the press and news media get you down," wrote one woman. "They are fools, dwell on sensationalism in a flagrant manner. They seem to be trying to run matters."

Another writer suggested "How about if we trade those nasty (and dumb) reporters for the hostages?"

Many of the "general comment" letters show a markedly cautious attitude toward future military ventures. "It is discouraging to learn that our military capabilities are not equal to the task of keeping aloft a few aircraft," wired one Palm Beach, Fla., resident. "I implore you not to attempt mining of any waters. A rescue may cause the loss of the entire fleet."

A doctor and his wife sent a wire from California that, short as it was, seemed to sum up much of the anguish that is accumulating in the Pentagon's mailbag:

"We are soft. Please fire the responsible people. Where is Patton?"

X-rays spun from solar furnace

By WALTER SULLIVAN
New York Times

NEW YORK — The Einstein Observatory, a satellite capable of mapping celestial X-ray sources with almost 10,000 times greater sensitivity than any previous spacecraft, is forcing astronomers to discard their standard explanation for the extraordinary heating of the solar atmosphere.

The extremely high temperature of the sun's atmosphere, or corona, compared with that of the solar surface, is one of the most remarkable features of the sun, and one of the most difficult to explain. Coronal temperatures reach 3 million degrees Fahrenheit, whereas the solar surface is at only about 10,000 degrees.

The corona becomes hot enough to glow at X-ray wavelengths and its visible light may show the telltale spectral lines from iron atoms so intensely heated that they have lost all but 11 of their 26 electrons.

It had been assumed that this heating is caused by acoustic waves generated by boiling action within the sun — by solar "thundering." This would mean that cool stars, such as those that are small or old and have only moderate internal churning, would not begin to heat their coronas sufficiently to glow in X-rays.

Now, though, it has been discovered that virtually all stellar atmospheres emit X-rays, including those of cool dwarf stars whose visible luminosity is one ten-thousandth that of the sun. Therefore, some astronomers are suggesting that the stellar atmospheres are greatly heated not by acoustic waves but by magnetic energy generated by the spinning stars. Fast-spinning stars, even if they are cool, would be the most efficient producers of such energy.

The findings were reported in Cambridge, Mass., at two recent meetings organized by the American Astronomical Society. One discussed results from the Einstein Observatory, which was place into orbit around the Earth in November 1978. The second explored the findings as they relate to the Sun. The Harvard-Smithsonian Centre for Astrophysics was host to both meetings.

Dr. Giuseppe Vaiana of the astrophysics centre said discovery that virtually all stars emit such X-rays, when only a few had been expected to do so, "is like coming to a party where you expect only a few guests, and finding 1,000 guys instead."

The Einstein Observatory can scan individual objects in space at X-ray wavelengths, and can therefore identify heat sources that are more than "red hot" or "white hot" — sources that are, in fact, "X-ray hot."

Stars are classed in letter designations by surface temperature, size, mass, brightness and lifetime. The sequence is O,B,A,F,G,K,M, with O standing for massive, bright, hot, and short-lived, and M for dwarf stars at the other extreme.

The Einstein observations have shown that, in X-rays, some O stars are a million times brighter than the sun and even some of the M stars are as bright or brighter. A nearby star, Proxima Centauri, although only a quarter of the sun's mass, is brighter than the sun and some stars close to the sun's size are 500 times brighter.

Dr. Robert Rosner of the Centre for Astrophysics reported that, instead of finding that each class of stars has a characteristic X-ray brightness, it was found that those in each class display a wide range of intensities. Thus it appears that the emissions are unrelated to the surface temperature and other factors used in classification of stars.

A clue to the explanation may lie in the observations that at least some of the stars that are very bright in X-rays also spin fast.

Like everything else in the universe, all stars rotate, although at diverse rates. At the Cambridge meetings it was proposed that such rotation, through a dynamo process, generates magnetism. This magnetic energy may be transferred from the Sun and other stars to their coronas by way of hydromagnetic (Alfven) waves, thereby greatly heating the coronas.

The faster a star spins, according to this hypothesis, the stronger its magnetism and therefore the greater the amount of magnetic energy transferred to its corona.

Hints that such waves may, in fact, be at work were reported to the meeting. Space scientists there also noted that in the early 1970s, when sunspots and magnetic activity on the sun reached a minimum, the corona cooled observably.

On being taken for a ride

NEW YORK — B. A. Cornell, an Australian visitor to New York, complains in a letter to the editor published the other day in The New York Times that he was bilked by a cab driver who charged him $40 for transport from the East Side Airlines Terminal to the Port Authority Bus Station.

This seems a strong accusation. To be sure, the cab fare from the Airlines Terminal to the Port Authority Station should amount to no more than $3, provided the passenger can tell the cab driver how to get there. Mr. Cornell obviously could not give accurate directions. This is understandable. He was a stranger in town. And so he was "taken for a roundabout ride and charged $40" for a $3 trip.

In accusing the driver of cheating him, however, Mr. Cornell assumes that the cab driver knew how to get from the Airlines Terminal to the Port Authority Station. Why does he not take the Christian attitude and assume that the cab driver had no better notion than he, Mr. Cornell, had of how to get there?

It may be that in Australia cab drivers know how to get from Point A to Point B without directions from their customers. This is not the case in New York. In New York no person may be licensed to drive a taxi until examination by the authorities proves that he cannot find his way around the city.

Now and then, if Mr. Cornell comes back to New York and is lucky, he may find an old-timer who can drive unerringly from Central Park to the Empire State Building. I myself found a cabbie last November who knew how to get from Rockefeller Center to Christopher Street in Greenwich Village.

His name will not be disclosed here, since the taxi authorities might haul him into court and revoke his license on charges of competence.

Let us all hope that Mr. Cornell will come back to New York and, next time, bring a large, detailed street map so he can enjoy directing our famous cabs and learn to love New York as the rest of us do.

A ready map can make all the difference in the world, particularly if the cab driver speaks English. If he doesn't, some very amusing fares may result. One night, wishing to go from Sutton Place on the East Side to Prince Street in Soho, I produced my map and began reciting directions, only to learn that the cab driver understood only Macedonian and a few snatches of demotic Turkish.

Did I accuse the poor wretch of cheating me when he overshot Prince Street by a mile and plunged into the Holland Tunnel? Of course not, Mr. Cornell. I enjoyed the sport as, threading his way through the streets of Jersey City in search of a translator, he sought to find a fellow Macedonian by pulling alongside pedestrians and shouting, "Hey, peoples! Hey, you peoples!"

Mr. Cornell has never known the fun of New York until he has tried to get from the 59th Street Bridge to Laguardia Airport in a cab driven by a Chinese who was immigrated just eight hours earlier from the Tibetan frontier and is under the impression that "Turn left at the next corner" and "Step on the gas" both mean "Go back to Astoria and start over."

It may seem that the taxi authorities of New York will not licence a person to drive a cab unless his only language is Macedonian, Chinese, demotic Turkish, Greek, Finnish, Urdu, Russian or Arabic, but this is not the case. In fact, there are extraordinary numbers of English-speaking drivers, considering that the taxi bureau will licence only English speakers who are allergic to smoke.

You can always tell whether your driver speaks English, Mr. Cornell, by glancing into the cab before entering. If the interior contains a printed announcement that says "No Smoking: Driver Allergic to Smoke," it is a safe bet that he will understand routing directions spoken in English.

No other cab fleet in the world boasts so many drivers allergic to smoke as New York's fleet. In fact, the city is so famed for its vast numbers of cabbies suffering from allergy to smoke that persons allergic to smoke come here from all over the United States so they can drive cabs that advertise their ailment.

Mr. Cornell does not state the time of day his $40 ride took place. If he wants the taxi bureau to take punitive action against the driver, however, he can get results if the ride occurred during the rush hour, immediately after the theatre closings, or during a rain.

New York taxi industry rules require all drivers during these periods of high public demand for service to switch on their "Off Duty" lights and race through the streets refusing to pick up passengers. If Mr. Cornell got his taxi during one of the "Off Duty" periods, he should find the taxi bureau willing to make the driver cry uncle.

SNAKE-LIKE outer covering of a flexible metal hose is rounded up by Sheryl Fitch at UOP's Fexonics Division plant in Bartlett, Ill. The flexing braid, which sheathes a bellows-type carrier for liquids and gases, protects the bellows convolution and increases the pressure-carrying capacity by restricting elongation. Chemical and energy industries use these hose assemblies because of their pressure, temperature and corrosion resistance.

Time Air for sale at $10.5M

CALGARY (CP) — Time Air president Stubb Ross of Lethbridge said today his airline is up for sale with a price tag of $10.5 million.

A Red Deer real estate firm specializing in the selling of companies has undertaken the task of testing the market to see if any buyers are available.

Ross said in a telephone interview that the real estate firm approached him about putting the airline up for sale.

Ross, who has 100-percent control of the airline, said he decided to sell because of difficulty in raising capital to fund the airline's future expansion.

Among those growth plans are applying for permanent authority to fly certain routes once held by Northward Airlines Ltd. of Edmonton, which now is in bankruptcy. It also involves signing a letter of intent for four De Havilland Dash 8 aircraft which are still in the design stage. Total purchase price is $17.4 million.

As well, Time Air plans to take delivery of its first Dash 7 at the end of May and a second 52-passenger aircraft at the end of August. By then, Time expects it will have authority from the air transport committee in Ottawa to operate the four turbo-prop powered aircraft on its Alberta services.

The Dash 8 is a twin-engine commuter aircraft capable of carrying 30 to 36 passengers.

Time's letter of intent asks for delivery of three Dash 8s in 1985 and one more in 1986 at a price of $4.35 million each.

Conoco makes oil strike in Alaska

NEW YORK (AP) — Conoco Inc. said Tuesday it has made an oil discovery 400 miles north of Fairbanks on the North Slope of Alaska, but has abandoned efforts at another site about 16 kilometres away.

The nation's ninth-largest oil company said a test well at Milne Point in the Prudhoe Bay area yielded oil at a rate of 785 to 1,340 barrels a day.

Conoco said additional drilling will be conducted after the summer "to evaluate the potential" of the site as a commercial oilfield.

Conoco said it was unsuccessful in finding oil in a well at nearby Gwydyr Bay. The well was drilled to a depth of about 3,700 metres at a cost of as much as $5 million before the effort was given up, the company said.

Costs of the Milne Point find "may be in excess of $8 million," Conoco said.

Conoco's partners at Milne Point are Champlin Petroleum Co., Cities Service Co., Hamilton Brothers Petroleum Corp., Hamilton International Oil Co. and Reading Bates Petroleum Co. The Hamilton companies and Reading Bates were partners with Conoco in the Gwydyr Bay project.

'Rheumatism' makes losers of winners

Commentary
By LEONARD SILK
New York Times

NEW YORK — Why have Germany and Japan, which lost the Second World War and endured Allied occupations, had the best postwar records of economic growth and price stability, while the United States and Britain, which won the war, have had low growth rates and much worse inflation?

A common theory is that Germany and Japan were, ironically, lucky to have suffered the destruction of so much of their existing capital plant from bombing. They were, the argument goes, compelled to rebuild and modernize their industrial structure far more extensively than the victors; hence, German and Japanese productivity climbed much faster than did American and British productivity after the war. This, the contention goes, also held down the rate of inflation in West Germany and Japan.

But Prof. Mancur Olson of the University of Maryland has a different explanation — and one that may help to account for the stagflation that has hampered both the United States and Britain. Olson's Evolutionary Approach to Macroeconomics, which is to be published in a forthcoming book, has been circulating privately among his fellow economists and some legislators. Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan (Dem-N.Y.) urged the participants at last week's conference on United States competitiveness at Harvard University to study the Olson theory of increasing organizational rigidity.

Olson maintains that the most important thing the war destroyed in Germany and Japan was not the physical plant and equipment, but the power of private organizations, including both labor unions and corporations, to impose their separate demands on the economy. This, he argues, broke the rigidity of wages and prices and made the West German and Japanese economies more capable of adjusting flexibly to market forces.

In the United States and Britain, however, there was no comparable shock to the organizational structure. Therefore, in most industries, both wages and prices were virtually impervious to downward pressures, whether of recession, loss of foreign markets or Government efforts to suppress inflationary demands through fiscal and monetary policy.

Instead, those downward pressures slowed the growth of production while permitting inflation to continue, thereby producing the phenomenon of stagflation.

In an earlier work, The Logic of Collective Action, Olson set forth a model that implied that industrial societies accumulate more special-interest organizations over time and that these inhibit the effective functioning of the economic system.

Those organizations, Olson contends, on balance reduce both economic efficiency and growth. They often do this partly through the market, by blocking entry and raising wages and prices above competitive levels; they often also worsen efficiency through lobbying for special government policies that favor them.

And if such industrial and labor organizations come to constitute the bulk of the owners of capital or of the labor force, the costs to the organizations themselves will counterbalance their efforts to achieve their gains at the expense of the rest of the society.

This organizational model has led Olson to the conclusion that countries such as Germany and Japan that had prewar totalitarian governments and postwar occupying armies that destroyed the common-interest organizations, or subsequently reconstituted them on a more "encompassing basis," would have relatively high levels of economic efficiency and growth.

But countries such as the United States and Britain, which have had stable freedom of organization and security from invasion, he concludes, will tend to grow more slowly as inefficiencies accumulate in their economic systems.

Societies with very encompassing organizations, like Sweden, will sometimes do better than similar societies with less inclusive organizations. And, applying his theory to the United States, Olson contends that the more recently industrialized states in the Sun Belt have had less time to accumulate common-interest organizations than those in the Northeast and Middle West and hence have had more effective economic performance and growth records.

The implication of the Olson thesis appears to be twofold, if stagflation in the United States or elsewhere is to be ended, either the power of common-interest organizations to hamper the efficient functioning of markets must be curbed, or the labor and industrial organizations must become more all-encompassing and more willing to identify their interests with the national interest.

If neither course is followed, inflation will persist and the "natural" rate of unemployment will tend to increase over time — except in periods of war. But victory in a war, which leaves the organizational structure of the society intact, may set the stage for a resumption of increasing rigidity in the price and wage system and growing inefficiency in production. The Anglo-Saxon countries, in Olson's term, have been suffering from a progressive industrial "rheumatism."

After silver crash, markets fear gov't curbs

CHICAGO (Reuter) — After experiencing an almost unbroken boom for the last decade, world commodity markets have undergone two major upheavals this year and some analysts believe they may never be the same again.

The first blow came Jan. 4 when President Carter announced an embargo on most U.S. food shipments to the Soviet Union in retaliation for Russian intervention in Afghanistan.

The decision cut off anticipated exports of about 17 million tonnes of American corn and wheat and sent grain prices tumbling.

The second came in late March when the world price of silver collapsed and a small group of wealthy investors controlling huge amounts of the precious metal were unable to cover their losses.

Commodity prices nosedived, a brief but frightening panic hit Wall Street stock markets, and the foundations of major brokerage houses trembled.

The Soviet grain embargo and the collapse of the silver market have raised the prospect of what traders and commodity exchange officials see as the greatest threat to the survival and success of their markets — more government interference and regulation.

The decision to shut off food supplies to Moscow was the first time the U.S. government had directly used a commodity as a direct political weapon and, in the eyes of some, set an ominous precedent.

And the profound repercussions of the silver incident through the entire financial world has prompted threats of more government control.

The Commodity Futures Trading Commission, the U.S. government's watchdog over commodity markets, has closed markets when it felt developments were getting out of hand.

In March 1979, it halted wheat trading on the Chicago Board of Trade, the world's largest commodity market, after allegations that a small group of investors was trying to corner the market and manipulate prices.

The board protested right up to the U.S. Supreme Court but the commission's action was upheld.

The commission also closed grain trading for two days following the embargo against the Soviet Union, prompting another furious outcry from the exchange.

Recently its crusading young chairman, James Stone — the very mention of whose name makes traders and exchange officials bristle — proposed much tougher federal control of the markets following the silver panic.

Stone fuelled some of the markets' worst fears when he suggested that his agency, rather than the exchanges, set so-called margin requirements.

Buying on margin allows speculators to put up only a fraction of a contract's worth, usually 10 per cent, in cash.

Although the appropriate exchanges in both New York and Chicago sharply raised these margin requirements when the silver market started falling apart, critics said that earlier government action could have averted the crisis.

Stone also proposed limiting the number of speculative contracts any one individual can hold, and restrictions on brokers lending to speculators.

But experts and analysts are divided as to the long-term impact of both the grain embargo and the silver debacle.

Optimists point out that record high interest rates have diverted a lot of money out of commodity markets and the anticipated recession was bound to dampen activity.

They say the fundamental resilience of commodity markets was shown when prices, led by gold, suddenly rebounded sharply upwards, albeit briefly, after the failed U.S. attempt to rescue the American hostages in Iran.

Fred Uhlmann, former Chicago Board of Trade president and a vice-president of the Drexel Burnham Lambert brokerage house, says the grain embargo merely accelerated the decline in grain prices which would have occurred anyway because of basic world over-supply.

On the silver situation, he says, users of futures markets are always prepared for sudden political developments affecting prices and he does not foresee any permanent damage.

But a veteran trader, who declined to be identified, says of the Soviet grain embargo:

"It has created a fundamental change in that it took demand out of the market, thereby increasing supplies and depressing prices. It also demoralized traders and caused many to withdraw when the United States broke its contract obligations."

Another trader says it would take a good six months before the smoke cleared in the silver market and public participation returned.

Although most food commodities are traded on basic supply and demand patterns, their prices are often distorted by such incidents as the silver panic because speculators tend to operate portfolios of commodities.

Someone caught with silver contracts when the price collapsed would have to sell contracts in, say, sugar or cocoa to cover his losses.

'It's people, not mines, that foul environment'

DUNCAN (CP) — Two senior provincial biologists say massive coal development in northeastern B.C. will have only a small impact on the environment.

Fred Harper, regional habitat protection biologist and Geoff Chislett, regional biologist for northeastern B.C., said that under B.C.'s coal guideline regulations the environment should be amply protected.

"Our biggest concern is the pressure that people will put on the environment in that area," Chislett said in an interview at the annual meeting of the 24,000-member B.C. Wildlife Federation in this eastern Vancouver Island community.

"If the coal deal with Japan goes ahead, plus other pending deals with European countries, there could be 10,000 people in the middle of that area and they will be the main problem."

Harper said that his main concern is not coal development but the amount of gas exploration in the area.

"On the Alberta side of the region is the giant Deep Basin gas discovery and companies have estimated already there will be one well per every three square miles over almost 15,000 square miles.

"That's one hell of a lot of wells and for every well you need a road to service it."

The fish and wildlife branch already has started to increase the numbers of fish including Arctic Grayling and Dolly Varden in anticipation of increasing population due to coal development and pressure to meet its recreation needs.

He said B.C. Railway's proposed $215 million, 115-kilometre Anzac spur line into the coal fields is the most acceptable of all proposals from an environmental standpoint but only if it is constructed properly.

Under B.C.'s coal guidelines, the companies must get special government review approval that involves three stages.

Stage one is the basic development, mining and environmental protection plans that are reviewed by different government committees; the second is specific details of the projects and the third is approval by the provincial cabinet's environment and land use committee.

Harper said only one company, British Petroleum, with a major coal property south of Chetwynd has reached stage two of the review process.

Meanwhile, Bill Otway, federation executive director, predicted there will be more than 10,000 kilometres of roads in northeastern B.C. that will cause major environmental problems.

He said the B.C. government is proposing to subsidize the coal development with millions of dollars for railway lines, coal cars and port facilities and townsite costs, but has yet to announce how much it will spend on "maintaining, protecting or enhancing the fish and wildlife resources of that region."

City hall sets example in energy conservation

VANCOUVER (CP) — Following efforts to set its own house in order, city hall is going public on energy conservation.

City employees drive ever-smaller cars, fewer lights burn in offices and corridors and the city has aided in building energy-saving townhouses in Champlain Heights.

And an energy conservation officer has been patrolling city hall and examining its methods for three years.

To educate the public, council plans:

— To open an information office in the Kitsilano area, to be staffed by the Scientific Pollution and Environmental Control Society (SPEC);

— To consider substantially increasing insulation standards for new buildings;

— To make available to the private sector a second, recently-hired conservation officer, who is a mechanical engineer;

— Possible pilot projects to conduct energy audits in some city homes.

The city supplied a project manager for the 94 three-bedroom townhouses in Champlain Heights.

Active and passive solar collection were considered, but conventional methods — insulation, forced-air gas furnace heating, double-glazed windows and thorough caulking — were used, to provide energy savings of 25 to 35 per cent.

Ten of the 167-square-metre units, which sell for $95,000 each, have been completed and 27 sold.

The city's fleet has been acquiring smaller cars, converting some to propane.

Tax fine levied

HAMILTON (CP) — The owner of a Hamilton body shop has been fined $17,500 after pleading guilty to a charge of evading personal income tax. Provincial court was told Ralph Criminisi, 40, of Burlington, kept a second set of books in which he recorded payments not presented in income tax statements for his company.

655-pupil lid at Willows?

A maximum of 655 pupils at Willows Elementary School should be recognized by school trustees, Greater Victoria school board planning committee is expected to recommend Friday.

Motions prepared for the meeting follow a session last week with parents of French immersion children constituting 209 of the current 672 pupils in the 28-room Oak Bay school.

In order to meet the enrolment objective the planning committee will consider a motion to cut French immersion enrolment at kindergarten level, reduce the school boundary, divide the school's open area into four classrooms and add a portable classroom in time for opening in September.

At the same time trustees will be urged to establish a new French kindergarten program at another school and that administrators frame guidelines for admission.

To control over-all admission at Willows, it will be recommended that first priority be given to those pupils already enrolled; second priority to children living within the school boundary; third to brothers and sisters of resident pupils; fourth to children resident within an optional area; and lastly to brothers and sisters of pupils in the optional area.

Territory covered by the optional area would cover most of the Uplands residential area east of Cadboro Bay Road to the waterfront, and north of Lansdowne to the Saanich boundary at Cadboro Bay.

Parents want the French immersion program from kindergarten to Grade 7 to remain at Willows and believe all who are now enrolled are entitled to continue attendance at Willows.

According to enrolment projections at the school, attendance by 1984 would number more than 850 and require 35 classrooms if steps are not taken. Some of the difficulty is due to an unanticipated increase in enrolment in the English program.

Montessori enrolment

About 20 vacancies remain for Victoria parents wishing to send young children to a Montessori school to open in a former School District 61 building in September.

Pacific Montessori Society is holding an information meeting at 7 p.m. Thursday in Emmanuel Baptist Church, Cedar Hill Cross Road, to describe the proposed program and how the school will be run.

Dave Colussi, spokesman for the non-profit society, said 50 children in pre-school and elementary levels to the age of eight are registered, leaving space for only 20 more.

He said Greater Victoria School District had promised the use of Oaklands Elementary School annex.

Cuba sends apology after sinking boat

Times News Services

NASSAU — Cuba, as demanded by the Bahamas, today sent its "sincere regrets" for the sinking of a Bahamian patrol boat by MiG fighter planes, but at the same time made some demands of its own.

Four Bahamian Defence Forces sailors were lost in the attack Saturday night.

Arraignment of eight Cuban fishermen on poaching charges — the incident that sparked the attack — was indefinitely delayed in Nassau.

There was speculation in Bahamas official circles the two Cuban fishing vessels seized by the patrol boat Flamingo before it was sunk may actually have been on secret surveillance missions for the Cuban government.

Bahamian authorities noted that Cuban fisherman have often been arrested for poaching inside the Bahamas' fishing zone. Routinely Havana has sent a representative to Nassau to pay fines and the fishermen were sent home without incident.

Radio Havana, quoting an official statement carried in today's edition of the Cuban Communist Party daily newspaper Granma, said, "If the sunken boat was really a Bahamas patrol boat, we sincerely regret the incident because our aim has always been to maintain the friendship and respect of this neighboring country."

At the same time, the statement demanded "an explanation of why this (patrol) boat fired on a fishing boat and why it disobeyed our warning (shots), and more important, an explanation of the whereabouts of the eight Cuban fishermen."

Meanwhile, along the Florida coast, a three-day lull in the flow of Cuban refugees, possibly caused by thunderstorms along the Cuban coast, has ended. More than 5,300 refugees arrived Sunday. It was the largest single-day influx of the three-week Flotilla.

Hardliners winning at Iran polls

TEHRAN (UPI) — Islamic hardliners Sunday headed for a comfortable majority in Iran's new parliament — charged with deciding the fate of the 53 American hostages — winning more than 50 percent of the vote in initial results.

President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr's more moderate group "for coordination among the people and the president" emerged as the second most distinct force in the balloting Friday. A third "independent" group with no immediately clear political leanings eroded some of provincial strength of the front-running coalition of the Islamic Republican Party and clergymen, political analysts said.

The hardliners have in the past said the Americans, now in their 190th day of captivity, should be tried as spies and Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has charged the 360-member parliament, scheduled to meet June 5, with deciding what will happen to the Americans.

Officials have already said the fate of the hostages, reportedly scattered in a dozen locations nationwide, will not be the first priority for discussion when the parliament convenes.

Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh was reported by Beirut's authoritative An Nahar Report and Memo to have sounded a warning privately to Arab leaders about the hostages. He reportedly expressed concern that economic sanctions, which the West and Japan threaten to join unless there is positive action by May 17, might force Iran to seek aide from the Soviet Union.

"... If the U.S. and its allies go ahead with a full quarantine, no rational policies can be expected from Iran," the newspaper quoted Ghotbzadeh as telling the Arab leaders in private during a recent tour.

"The American hostages will be killed and shipping to and from the Gulf countries will be sabotaged."

Meanwhile, Iran's "hanging judge" used a sledgehammer Sunday to begin the demolition of the mausoleum that once contained the body of the deposed shah's father. Restrooms or a museum will be built on the site.

An official in the office of President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, quoted by the official Pars news agency, said the Islamic judge, Sheikh Sadegh Khalkhali, was asked to halt the demolition at Rey, south of Tehran, because the Islamic regime intended to keep the buidling intact and "convert it into a monument of the crime."

Five Libyan embassies seized

United Press International

Libyan students seized their nation's embassies in several capitals today, proclaiming them "people's bureaus" in support of Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy.

Groups of students took over Libyan embassies in Switzerland, Austria, Turkey, East Germany and Czechoslovakia in support of a proclamation by Khadafy allowing Libyans to participate in the administration of governmental institutions as well as Libya's embassies abroad.

In Vienna some 50 Libyan students took over their country's embassy, apparently with the consent of the ambassador. The students draped the embassy railings with flags and notices proclaiming it to be the "Libyan People's Bureau of the socialist Libyan Arab people."

In Prague, Libyan students stormed the embassy, apparently without hindrance from the Czech police, and said they were forming a "people's bureau" but refused to comment further on the action.

Last month Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy urged the "people" to take over the country's embassies. Similar take-overs occurred in Turkey, Switzerland and East Germany.

In Bern, Switzerland, students took over the Libyan Embassy and proclaimed it a "Peoples Bureau." A student spokesman inside the compound said the embassy would in the future be run by a five-member

"The ambassador and four other embassy staff personnel will continue to do their work, however," the spokesman said.

MOBILE, Ala. (UPI) — A young woman skydiver whose parachute failed fell almost 2½ kilometres into a cluster of pine trees and was hospitalized Monday in fair condition, bruised but otherwise unhurt.

Police said Ila Zan Taylor, 20, of Pascagoula, Miss., was skydiving near a small airport Sunday, her parachute and failed to open properly.

Hospital officials said the woman suffered a sprained ankle and bruises. It was her 32nd parachute jump.

Wyetta Hill, an eyewitness to the incident, said the woman's parachute opened "but when it did it was all tangled up. I live next door to the airport and was watching them come down. They do it every weekend and we take the family outside to watch."

In case you're wondering

Nature takes care of raccoons

As we have raccoons living in a tree in our garden, I have often wondered what happens to them when they die. Can you tell me?

There was at least one prominent theologian centuries ago who argued that animals who died went to an animal heaven.

Interestingly, Wayne Campbell, assistant curator of vertebrate zoology at the Provincial Museum, says his department receives dozens of calls from people wanting to know what happens to wild animals when they die.

The answer: it depends on the species of animal.

Campbell says very few animals live longer than a year as they usually fall victim to a predator or some kind of accident. Any raccoon that does live to a ripe old age and is ready to die simply curls up under a convenient tree and dies. Insects, crows, ravens, bears, cougars — the list of nature's disposal specialists is long — soon dispose of the remains.

Primates (monkeys, gorillas and that most ferocious of creatures, man) usually care for their aged until they die of disease or old age.

An old bull sea lion, however, unable to woo and hang on to a harem, is simply chased away.

Although few wild creatures live beyond their first year of life, there's always one that refuses to cash in his chips.

Through banding of birds while they're still in a nest, zoologists know there is a 27-year-old seagull.

If your interest has been aroused by some feature of Victoria — or even some oddity — write to Wondering, Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas.

20 police officers learning sophisticated ways to pull the plug on law-breakers

By DEREK SIDENIUS

An elite corps of police officers from across Canada will head to Ottawa in June for special training in investigation of computer crimes.

Twenty officers are slated to attend the one-month course, the first of its kind, at the Canadian Police College.

Three will be from B.C. including two members of the RCMP commercial crime sections in Victoria and Vancouver and one member of the Vancouver City police force. Names of the B.C. participants have not been announced.

Another course will be offered in the fall and three more are planned next year.

Cpl. Jim Mann of the Vancouver RCMP commercial crime section said knowledge of computer sciences is becoming more important in investigating white collar crime.

Mann is one of only three members of the 3,800-member RCMP contingent in B.C. fully trained for investigative purposes. He has a degree in computer sciences from the University of Alberta.

One of the other two officers, a recent recruit, has been attached to the patrol division but is soon to be transfered to a commercial crime unit. The third works in the RCMP intelligence section.

Police have no idea the extent of computer frauds in Canada but judging by the number of cases being reported in the United States, Mann said it is obvious that if there aren't problems now, there will be in future.

He said computer companies have been loath to report cases for fear of the bad publicity and loss of confidence that may result.

"They don't want to advertise the fact they are vulnerable," he said.

"If a problem is detected they will try to deal with the situation in other ways."

Mann, who will be in Victoria Wednesday to talk about computer crimes to delegates attending the third annual conference of the Canadian Information Processing Society, said there isn't a computer system on the market that is completely foolproof.

"Most systems can be penetrated with the right expertise," he said.

In the past three years only a handful of cases have come to police attention in B.C.

One, in 1977, involved a University of British Columbia professor charged with unauthorized use of a National Research Council computer. The case is still before the courts.

Another the following year resulted in the conviction of a person for illegally using the computer at Simon Fraser University.

Mann described the person, a non-student, as a "computerholic" who learned the secret passwords by looking over the shoulders of computer operators. He would then return and spend hours searching through university files before he was finally caught.

Last year an employee of a credit union in Merritt was convicted of stealing money by transferring deposits to her account in the bank's computer system.

An employee of a trust firm tried the same trick but was discovered when he attempted to set up a separate account for his ill-gotten gains. The computer wasn't programmed to accept deposits in such a manner.

Mann said the earliest computer crimes were amazingly simple — a person punching a repeat button and getting 200 cheques printed out or someone replacing blank deposit slips with his or her own account number on the bottom.

"With the rapid computerization people overlooked the simple things that could be done."

Financial institutions have become wise to some of the shortcomings and refined their systems. But crooks have simply become more sophisticated.

Mann said the problem has spawned a whole new industry — computer security.

Most major users now have data security officers and security consultant firms are beginning to spring up across North America. Safeguards are greatest Nowhere is the security as tight as in highly sensitive areas such as national security and defence.

Mann said the U.S. military, for example, now has select teams of computer whizzes whose sole job is to try to find cracks in the system.

As fas as Mann is concerned there will always be cracks. It will just be tougher finding them.

Radar okayed for Pat Bay

The federal government has approved installation of radar at Victoria International Airport but the news hasn't been made official yet.

A spokesman for the airport said today his office hasn't yet heard the word from Ottawa and only knows what's contained in the brief news reports from the east.

Transport Minister Jean-Luc Pepin told the House of Commons today that approval had been given to install radar at the aiport.

He was responding to questions from Progressive Conservative Don Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich). Pepin gave no further details.

Munro suggested the minister wasn't aware of the lack of radar at the airport. Pepin replied that Munro might be well informed about Victoria but probably doesn't know what is happening at other airports.

Boaters run into trouble

The centre handled 39 incidents from Friday until Sunday evening, most of them involving small boats.

There were 25 breakdowns, 23 of them pleasure craft, the remainder fishing vessels.

The 26-foot pleasure craft One Wish caught fire at the Iona Jetty in the north arm of the Fraser River. The fire was put out by a Canadian Coast Guard hovercraft. Two people aboard were unharmed. The Canadian Marine Rescue vessel Monsoon towed the One Wish to Delta.

Woman survives truck flip

Deborah Horne, 35 Obed, was treated for minor face cuts after the truck she was driving overturned at Gorge and Washington Sunday at 9:13 p.m.

City police said the truck westbound on Gorge mounted a curb, glanced off a tree, sheared off a telephone pole and smashed a traffic light standard before coming to rest on its roof.

Police said the driver lost control as the truck approached the intersection and when it struck the curb part of its steering and underframe were ripped out.

Second Island Highway ruled out by Fraser

Highways Minister Alex Fraser today ruled out construction of a second Island Highway from Duncan to Campbell River.

The proposal was made on the weekend by delegates to the annual meeting of the Association of Vancouver Island Municipalities (AVIM).

They cited increasing traffic congestion on the highway since the new northern section to Port Hardy opened last year and heavy trucking activity on the southern portion.

The motion from Campbell River municipal council, which was endorsed by the AVIM plenary session, also noted that the majority of Island communities don't want any major upgrading of the Island Highway through their towns.

However, Fraser said twinning the Island Highway is not feasible. The section between Duncan and Nanaimo has already been four-laned and is adequate for traffic volumes, he said.

He also pointed out that a $100,000 study is under way into the feasibility of a bypass around Nanaimo. The minister calls the present section of highway through downtown Nanaimo "the biggest bottleneck in the province."

Mayor Frank Ney of Nanaimo said the proposal was new to him. Nanaimo city council's lobbying has mainly been in the area of a bypass.

"The concept is interesting but I'm concerned whether the arithmetic would work."

Ney said the highways department has indicated it will go ahead on the bypass project, estimated to cost $30 million and to take 10 years to complete, but a route has yet to be chosen. Twice the city has made proposals but residents in the vicinity have protested loudly.

In the meantime, he said Nanaimo city itself will probably go ahead with a "a sort of mini-bypass" by widening Bowen Road for about $6 million.

AVIM president Mel Couvelier, mayor of Saanich, said the majority of Island communities through which the highway now passes endorsed the resolution, except the city of Nanaimo.

Nanaimo remained neutral but the Nanaimo Regional District is backing the concept, he said.

Fraser said the highway has been widened to four lanes as far as Parksville and he hopes to continue widening it north to Courtenay, but after that he feels it would be impossible.

Another $100,000 study is under way to find a new inland route from Courtenay to Campbell River. The present highway between the two communities is "the most congested piece of highway in B.C.," he said.

"It carries the same amount of traffic as the Trans-Canada Highway at Kamloops."

Fraser said the biggest problem with the AVIM proposal is land acquisition. His department spent $20 million last year just on buying property for new highway rights of way. Sometimes the government has to buy up entire businesses.

The minister said similar problems exist with the Sunshine Coast transport corridor proposed during the weekend by Ian Sherwin, president of the Victoria Social Credit constituency association.

It conflicts with the floating bridge-tunnel concept promoted by Science Minister Pat McGeer and Vancouver Island residents probably wouldn't permit it.

Sherwin's proposal would, as he put it, "open up the potential industrial heartland of Vancouver Island."

A series of bridges and tunnels woud link the Lower Mainland with the Campbell River area, opening hundreds of square miles of developable, non-agricultural land for housing and industry.

Public say on centre

Now is the time for all good citizens to learn about the waterfront convention centre.

If you have a beef or a compliment the next three days will provide the forum.

The Provincial Capital Commission is staging an information exhibit in the McPherson theatre foyer which runs from today until Wednesday.

The showing of scale models, conceptual drawings and detailed presentation drawings began at noon today and runs to 9 p.m. The same schedule is in effect the other two days.

On hand to answer questions will be representatives of the commission, which is building the $8 million centre, and officials of the Vancouver architectural firm of Merrick Chandler Kennedy which designed the project.

PCC manager Ken Patton said today there will be a large-scale model showing the proposed centre in greater detail than the first model shown to city council in March. It will depict the materials to be used in construction.

As well, there will be a colored rendering of the design in perspective showing the relationship between the centre and the surrounding buildings on Wharf, Patton added.

Citizens will also be able to fill in cards with their written comments on the centre.

The commission announced the forum after controversy broke out when the first detailed plans of the convention centre were presented to Victoria city council in March.

Former mayor Peter Pollen, Ald. Robin-Blencoe and a number of citizen activists have criticized the design as well as the use of the three-acre site on Wharf at the foot of Fort.

Reserve tickets on sale for jetfoil run

Tickets went on sale in Seattle today and go on sale in Victoria Tuesday for Friday's inaugural runs of jetfoil service between the two cities.

The jetfoil makes its first departure from Seattle at 6 a.m. Friday, arriving here at 8. At 8:30 a.m. the first trip leaves Victoria for Seattle, arriving two hours later.

The jetfoil will continue the same schedule daily, leaving Seattle at 6 a.m. and 4 p.m. and leaving Victoria at 8:30 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. There will be an additional mid-day trip in each direction in the peak summer period.

All tickets are on a reserve basis although walk-on passengers will be accepted when space is available.

Flying Princess Transportation Co. president Pat Crofton said he expected the majority of passengers will travel on a reserved-seat basis.

"Starting Tuesday it will be possible to reserve for any trip, even as late as September. But the ticket must be paid for and collected to confirm the reservation."

Reservations are made through participating travel agents or at the office of the B.C. Steamship Co., 390 Belleville, which operates the Victoria Princess, formerly the Queen of Prince Rupert. The ferry will also operate on a reserved-seat basis.

Jetfoil fares from Victoria, all in Canadian funds, are $25 one way and $40 return for adults; $15 one way and $24 return for senior citizens, and one-half the adult fare for children 2 to 11. Children under 2 travel free on the jetfoil.

Fares on the Victoria Princess are $15 Canadian one way and $25 return for adults; $8 one way and $13 return for senior citizens, and free for children under 5.

It will be possible to travel one way on the Victoria Princess and the other by jetfoil under special combination fares of $35 for adults and $21 for senior citizens.

The Victoria Princess will make one round trip daily from May 16 to June 22, two round trips a day from June 23 to Sept. 1 and one round trip a day from Sept. 2 to Oct. 6. However, she will make only one return trip on Tuesday during the June 23-Sept. 1 period in order to allow time to meet safety drill requirements.

7:30 a.m., leave Seattle, arriving in Victoria at noon.

6 p.m., leave Victoria, arriving in Seattle at 10:30 p.m.

Daily schedule from June 23 to Sept. 1, except Tuesdays:

7:30 a.m., leave Seattle, arriving in Victoria at noon.

12:30 p.m., leave Victoria, arriving in Seattle at 5 p.m..

6 p.m., leave Seattle, arriving in Victoria at 10:30 p.m.

11 p.m., leave Victoria, arriving in Seattle at 6:15 a.m.

Daily schedule from Sept. 2 to Oct. 6 is the same as the May 16-June 22 schedule.

A lunch and champagne flight on the jetfoil will be held Thursday for local dignitaries and the media.

The Thursday events begin at 11:30 a.m. when 100 Seattle officials arrive on the jetfoil and join five B.C. cabinet ministers and local government representatives for a lunch on board the Victoria Princess.

About 2 p.m. the officials and newsmen will board the jetfoil for a one-hour test run in the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

At 4 p.m. the jetfoil will head for Seattle for servicing at Boeing in preparation for its first regularly scheduled run.

REGINA (CP) — Defenceman Robert Savard's solo dash down the ice for a goal at 1:28 of overtime gave Cornwall Royals the Memorial Cup Sunday in a dramatic sudden-death finish to a playoff series marred by mob scenes and egg throwing. Cornwall won 3-2.

Ron Scott's superb goaltending was the key factor in Cornwall's unanticipated but well-deserved victory.

Unfortunately, the jubilant Royals' triumph was overshadowed by accusations that the defending champion Peterborough Petes had deliberately lost an earlier round-robin game to ensure that the hometown Regina Pats would not reach the final.

Peterborough's inept performance in the round-robin encounter Friday night allowed the Royals to scramble from behind a three-goal deficit and steal a 5-4 decision that put them in Sunday's final instead of the Western Hockey League champion Pats.

Partisan fans in the Regina Agridome reacted angrily, launching a barrage of insults and debris at the Peterborough bench in a nasty half-hour disturbance that eventually had to be quelled by city police.

The fan resentment spilled over into Sunday's game that decided Canada's major junior hockey championship. Only about 3,000 of 5,736 fans who had purchased tickets showed up. They brought with them signs decidedly uncomplimentary to the Petes.

Most banners zeroed in on Peterborough manager-coach Mike Keenan. One in particular had a crude drawing of the rear end of a horse on one side, preceded by the words "Keenan you."

Eggs were rocketed at the Peterborough bench throughout the game, forcing Keenan to take evasive action. A live chicken was tossed onto the shoulder of Petes defenceman Stuart Smith.

Referee Murray Harding had to stop play briefly at least a dozen times while crews scraped off the ice surface. A final fusilade of eggs, soft drinks, popcorn and paper was directed at the dejected Petes as they gathered at centre ice for presentation ceremonies.

The incidents convinced the Canadian Major Junior Hockey League that a change is needed in the Memorial Cup playoff format — a three-team double round-robin leading to a sudden-death final.

CMJHL president Ed Chynoweth said a committee has been formed to come up with a recommendation that will make it impossible to again create a situation in which "one team can control somebody else's destiny."

Captain Dan Doust and defenceman Dave Ezard, described by general manager-coach Doug Carpenter as the Royals' "right arm," scored the other Cornwall goals, both on the power play.

Savard swept in unmolested to put the winning goal — his first of the series — through the pads of Petes' Rick LaFerriere, who was named the series' top goaltender.

Keenan, his suit jacket stained where a well-aimed soft drink container had found its mark, denied that the Petes threw the game against Cornwall and rebuked reporters for being irresponsible.

He said the egg shower was a definite distraction to the Petes.

John is sultan of slowballers

NEW YORK (AP) — Tommy John waxed poetic Sunday, seaching for an analogy to explain why he is currently one of the hottest properties in baseball.

"It don't mean a thing if you ain't got that swing," says John. "I'm floating the ball in there — I am in a good groove. . . .

"I don't overthrow and I don't underthrow, I just keep the same speed and the same rhythm," the 36-year-old New York Yankees' ace admitted Sunday after running his 1980 record to 6-0 ith a 5-0 shutout of Minnesota Twins.

"It's like one of those sweet Julius Boros golf swings. You don't have to overpower the ball to get results, whether it's baseball or golf."

John is an excellent golfer as well as a pitcher whose major league career has spanned half his life. He started with Cleveland Indians in 1963 and spent seven years with Chicago White Sox and seven with Los Angeles Dodgers before joining the Yankees in 1979 as a $1.375-million addition to George Steinbrenner's cast of millionaires.

"I like to pitch the way fellows like Boros and Gene Littler play golf," John said. "The guy who tries to murder the ball may get 300 yards on his drive but most of the time he's hitting his second out of the woods or weeds.

"Take Boros and Littler — an easy, effortless swing, 275 yards in the middle of the fairway, then on the green and into the cup.

"I've never thrown the ball hard. I have never been a strikeout pitcher. I think strikeouts are sometimes overrated. They're still just another out, same as a pop fly to centre or a ground out to Bucky Dent or Willie Randolph."

If Nolan Ryan is king of the fireballers, Tommy John is sultan of the slowballers, master of a lazy sinker that dips over the lower corner of the plate and dies like a stricken sparrow. They call it the "snake" pitch.

Opposing batters have another name for it unsuited for family consumption. They swing. They lunge. They puff. Normally they wind up hitting the ball along the ground for an easy out or a double play. John racks up 20 and more ground-outs a game.

With this device, John has surged to the fastest pitching start of the season through the first month's play, three shutouts and an earned-run average of 1.77.

Only Rick Honeycutt of Seattle Mariners has matched his winning pace while failing to keep up with his ERA.

John is a rangy (6-foot-3, 203 pounds) Hoosier who turned down 34 other college basketball scholarship offers to attend his hometown college, Indiana State in Terre Haute, Ind., where Larry Bird recently became the town's No. 2 sports celebrity.

But he is more than just a mound artisan who is only two away from his 200th pitching victory. He is baseball's Mr. Nice Guy, the epitome of class on and off the field.

He is a fresh, blythe spirit in a clubhouse which has had more than its share of feuds and jealousies — respected by clubmates, enjoyed by the press, adored by the fans. He is a rarity in a cynical world.

John, who admits he admired the style of Bob Gibson, works quickly and maintains a fast, steady rhythm that opponents try to sabotage.

"Sparky Anderson, when he was managing Cincinnati, always tried to break my rhythm," John said. "George Foster would stoop down to tie his shoelaces, others kept stepping out of the box. . . .

"When I'm pitching in a steady rhythm, I find the defence plays better. The guys behind me don't settle back on their heels so much."

John's career was almost ended in 1974 when he ruptured a ligament in his throwing elbow. A Los Angeles surgeon, Dr. Frank Jobe, took a tendon from Tommy's right arm and transplanted it in his left elbow. They thought he'd never pitch again. John's comeback was a modern sports miracle.

"I never worried," said John, recalling the ordeal. "I knew the Good Lord would take care of Tommy John.

"If He didn't want me to pitch, he had something else for me to do."

Arbour hits choke label

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (CP) — Coach Al Arbour of New York Islanders savored the series clincher against Buffalo Sabres with elation. But he couldn't hide the hurt and anger churning inside.

"For all of you people who have been saying that our club has been choking all the time, just remember this one, eh?" said Arbour, addressing reporters gathered in the victorious Islanders' dressing room.

For years the Islanders have been fair game for criticism — many of their fans were New York Rangers fans before moving to Long Island, and many fans still support the mid-town rivals.

"Choke" has become such a common word in sports that its meaning often conveys thoughts of hopelessness and being inept. It's a mean word to hockey players, especially the young Islanders' teams that made the playoffs six times but lost four of five semifinals.

But this is a different team — better balanced than any before in the eight-year history of the club.

It showed Saturday night in one of the great playoff games of the season. The Islanders reached the Stanley Cup final for the first time, eliminating the Sabres four games to two in their best-of-seven series.

After Gil Perreault put the Sabres two goals up early in the game, the Islanders stormed back with five unanswered goals by John Tonelli, Mike Bossy, Bob Lorimer, Duane Sutter and Bobby Bourne to win 5-2.

"Everybody just gave every ounce of blood they had out there in that game, coming back like that," said Arbour.

The best-of-seven final opens Tuesday night in Philadelphia's Spectrum against the Flyers.

Second game of the final will be played at the Spectrum Thursday night. Third and fourth games are at Nassau Coliseum, Saturday and Monday nights.

The fourth game was shifted to Monday to avoid a Canadian television conflict between hockey and the Quebec referendum vote next Tuesday.

The Islanders faced considerable criticism from the local press — and their fans — after they lost the fourth game of the semifinals on home ice 7-4 blowing a 3-1 lead. Then they bowed to the Sabres 2-0 in Buffalo Thursday.

Several players were mindful that if they lost the series to the Sabres after leading by three games, they would have been saddled with "the worst choke team in NHL history," by the local media.

The choke label infuriated Arbour and the players, but it's one that is not easily lost. Making the final helped. Winning the cup would bury it.

ELBOW IN EAR is reward for Caldwell Jones of Sixers in attempt to prevent Kareem Aubdul-Jabbar from getting shot away in National Basketball Association playoff game Sunday at Philadelphia. Jabbar was held to 23 points as Sixers clipped Lakers 105-102 to even final at 2-2.

Double D does in Lakers for '76ers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — There finally was agreement between Philadelphia 76ers and Los Angeles Lakers.

Coaches and players from both teams were unanimous that 252-pound Darryl Dawkins was the difference Sunday as the 76ers beat the Lakers 105-102 and evened their National Basketball Association championship series at two games apiece.

Dawkins and little Maurice Cheeks scored 44 points between them and triggered a third-period rally that earned the 76ers a split in the two games here. The series resumes Wednesday in Los Angeles.

Dawkins scored 26 points. He shot 12 for 23 from the field, made 2-of-3 from the foul line, grabbed six rebounds, handed out three assists and played a good part of the final period with five fouls.

Jim Chones had the unenviable job of guarding the gung-ho Dawkins Sunday, but Chones worked under the handicap of four fouls less than two minutes into the second half. Dawkins said he took advantage of that situation.

"Chones had four fouls and I knew I could take it to him," said Dawkins. "It was play me or foul me.

"Either one is fine."

Dawkins, who entered the NBA four years ago straight out of high school, said the 76ers ran plays designed to get him the ball.

"We were really struggling until Double D took over," said Philadelphia coach Billy Cunningham.

"A lot of people have criticized Darryl. But I've said it before and I'm saying it again — Dawkins has shown me he wants to win and has tremendous determination, which he showed again today."

"I have no initial response," said L.A. coach Paul Westhead, who apparently was miffed with the defeat and with some of the officiating.

He said Dawkins "was very aggressive inside with strength and power going to the basket."

He also said he did not believe that double teaming that held Kareem Abdul-Jabbar to 23 points and 11 rebounds was going to stop the Lakers' 7-2 giant from UCLA.

Julius Erving had 23 points for he 76ers.

Earvin (Magic) Johnson led the Lakers with 28.

Probe of soccer riot

A full scale investigation is to be launched into the riot at Saturday's Scottish Cup final, police and soccer authorities confirmed in Glasgow today.

Fifty people received hospital treatment and 210 arrests were made after Celtic's 1-0 overtime victory over Rangers.

The lone goal of the game was scored when Rangers goalkeeper Peter McCloy palmed George McCluskey's deflection into his own net after 177 minutes of play.

Celtic fans mainly are Catholic and Rangers fans are nearly all Protestants. Matches between the two clubs often have often been marred by disturbances.

A police spokesman announced that the investigation would centre on the inability of the security fence to prevent the fans running onto the field.

Mounted police were forced to wield long batons to force back bottle and brick-throwing fans.

More than 300 police were on duty to keep a check on the 70,000 fans.

More than 80,000 fans are expected to attend the Scotland-England international match at the same stadium in two weeks. That match now is in doubt and the forthcoming Glasgow Cup final between the Celtic and the Rangers already has been scrapped.

Elsewhere in sports, Danny Ongais and Gordon Johncock moved into the lineup for the 64th Indianapolis 500, putting together solid, if unspectacular, qualifying runs Sunday.

The two veteran drivers were the only big-name qualifiers on a quiet second day of time trials at the Indianapolis Speedway.

Saturday was far more hectic, with 16 cars making it into the 33-car field.

Two-time Indy winner Johnny Rutherford, outdistancing the field in his Chaparral racer, took the pole position with an average speed of 309.398 kilometres an hour (192.256 miles an hour). Also making the first row were former-winners Mario Andretti and Bobby Unser.

In Toronto, returning Jimmy Bone and Cliff Calvert combined Sunday afternoon to help Toronto Blizzard out of a slump.

Bone, 30, second in voting for Scotland's player-of-the-year after helping St. Mirren to third spot in the Scottish Premier Division, was back for his first game with the Blizzard this season.

He scored one of Toronto's goals and assisted on the other, by Calvert, as the Blizzard broke a two-game losing streak by defeating Tulsa Roughnecks 2-0.

In other NASL games Sunday, Houston Hurricane shut out Edmonton Drillers 2-0, Tampa Bay Rowdies shaded Philadelphia Fury 2-1, New York Cosmos battered Memphis Rogues 4-0, Portland Timber defeated Washington Diplomats 4-2 and Los Angeles Aztecs dropped Minnesota Kicks 2-1.

On Saturday, Seattle Sounders shocked Fort Lauderdale Strikers 4-0, Dallas Tornado blew away San Diego Sockers 2-0, Detroit Express rolled over Atlanta Chiefs 3-0, Chicago Sting squeaked past California Surf 3-2 and New England Tea Men blanked San Jose Earthquakes 1-0.

Unruly Iranian players ousted from Indonesia

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Indonesian authorities asked Iranian soccer players to leave the country today after an unruly display by players and their coach during a match in the north Sumatra capital of Medan.

The incident took place during a match between Iran and the Netherlands Sunday. The Netherlands won 2-1.

The Iranian players refused to accept a penalty kick awarded to the Netherlands for a hand-ball committed by one of the Iranian players.

The Iranians finally gave in and allowed the Netherlands to take the penalty kick, which was missed, but a fight broke out when two Iranian officials, Mahmoud Soubtiji and Resad Messarafi, attacked Soedarso, the Indonesian referee, after the game.

Tom aims at bonanza

Times News Services

They called it incredible and ironic, ho-hum and high drama. It probably was some of each. Whatever, Tom Watson's victory Sunday in the $300,000 Byron Nelson golf tournament at Dallas, Tex., propelled the fairway financier toward the richest jackpot in the history of a game he now dominates.

"Just four more rounds," he grinned. "I'm looking ahead now to that $200,000 bonus."

Watson, 30, conquered bumpy greens, blustery winds and two serious challenges and swept to a one-shot, $54,000 triumph that sent Professional Golfers' Association officials scurrying for the record book.

The Nelson verdict was his third straight and fifth of the year and sends him into the $300,000 Colonial National Invitation at nearby Fort Worth with a monumental incentive. It's called the Texas Bonanza.

Sponsors of the Nelson and Colonial put up $200,000 in bonus prize money for any golfer who could win the tournaments on consecutive weekends. Watson narrowed the list of potential winners to one.

"I've never won three in a row before," he said after his third straight Sunday. Then, with a smile, he added: "I've never won four in a row, either."

Watson closed the rain-delayed, 36-hole finale Sunday with rounds of 69 and 71 for a 72-hole total of 274 over the 6,993-yard, par-70 Preston Trail course.

The six-under-par effort, including a spectacular 64 on Friday, was a stroke ahead of Bill Rogers, whose closing 70-67 earned him second place.

Watson, who has led or shared the lead in his last 12 rounds of competitive golf, now has 1980 earnings of $300,525.

In a Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament at Atlanta, Ga., Pam Higgins fired a thre-under par 70 and broke out of a deadlock with Amy Alcott to score her first victory since 1977 with an 11-under-par, 208 total.

Donna Caponi Young, leading money winner this year, made the biggest charge with a 67 to share second with Alcott, who finished with 73 for 211.

Stu Holroyd: Island open golf champ

Believing in own ability key to Holroyd victory

By ERNIE FEDORUK

The year 1978 was a good one for a pair of young golfers at Gorge Vale, but 1980 happens to be even better.

Stu Holroyd, an unheralded 22-year-old University of Victoria student, and Rick Casson, 24, both came up with their biggest golf victories of their young careers Sunday by winning the open and handicap championships, respectively, in the 31st annual Vancouver Island Open.

Holroyd did it by defeating the medallist and defending champion, Dave Mick, 3 and 2 in the 36-hole playoff at Glen Meadows.

Casson, an apprentice glazier who plays off an eight handicap, charged back strongly in the afternoon round to overcome a three-hole deficit and beat Glen Barras, a 48-year-old accountant, one up, in the handicap finale.

Before Sunday, the most notable golf victories scored by both Holroyd and Casson were achieved in 1978. Ironically, in the same tournament — the Esquimalt Amateur. Holroyd was the low gross winner and Casson won the low net prize.

In preventing Mick from becoming the first to win the CFAX Trophy in three successive years, Holroyd became a believer in himself.

Wrapping up exams a few weeks ago, Holroyd delayed search for summer employment to work on his golf game. He practised several hours each day, often supervised by Gorge Vale professional Earl Davies.

Davies offered some technical tips but the pro's most persistant advice to Holroyd was "to believe" in himself and his capabilities.

The message obviously was received and Holroyd used steadiness of the tees and some solid putting to conquer Mick, the 29-year-old dentist with a flock of impressive golf credentials.

"If I missed any fairways off the tee," Holroyd said, "I came up with some pretty good lies in the rough that allowed me to recover."

Both Mick and Holroyd matched pressure putt for pressure putt, particularly in the five-to-eight-foot range, all day. The difference, however, was in the driving. Mick's belts off the tees provided him with some of his greatest grief, particularly in the late stages when it appeared as if he was about to mount a comeback charge.

Four down after the morning 18 and with the deficit the same after 26 holes, Mick looked as if he was ready to rally by winning the par-five 27th with a birdie four.

Mick sliced the deficit to two by winning the 29th but a poor approach ("I tore out a foot of turf") on the 30th stalled the defending champion. On the next tee, he drove his tee shot into a resevoir, took a lateral drop and a one-stroke penalty and fell back to three down.

MacNeil, Evans spark Timbermen

COQUITLAM (CP) — Ron MacNeil came up with a rare nine-goal performance as Nanaimo Timbermen outscored Coquitlam Adanacs 20-17 in Western Lacrosse Association action Saturday night.

Brian Evans also had a big game for the Timbermen, collecting 12 points, including three goals.

Coquitlam held period leads of 8-4 and 12-10 before Nanaimo got untracked with a 10-goal third period, including five power-play markers.

Also scoring for the Timbermen were Wayne Reeves and Doug Angrove with two goals each. Rober Dubyna, Ken King, Ted Greeves and Ian Kennedy added singles.

Adanacs were led by Kevin Parsons with four goals while Jim Aitchison, Mike Reelie, Dan Wilson and Gord Quilty each had a pair. Rounding out the scoring were Mark Valastin, Mat Aitken, Randy Delmonico, Gary Lindsay and Tim Kelly.

Goaltender Mac Maude stopped 43 shots for Nanaimo during the goaltender's nightmare while Greg Thomas and John Lewis combined for 41 saves in the Coquitlam nets.

Four players were ejected in the third period when a brawl interrupted the shooting spree.

Penalties hurt Legion

BURNABY — Doug Deschner scored three goals and assisted on three others as Burnaby Cablevision utilized the odd-man play to defeat Esquimalt Legion 18-12 in a Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League game Sunday.

Esquimalt was assessed 28 minutes in penalties while Burnaby had 12.

"They scored five odd-man goals to our one," said Esquimalt general-manager Bob Reid.

"It was a well refereed game," he added. "We earned most of the penalties."

Paulo Brunoro added three goals and two assists for Burnaby, which lead 6-4 after the first period and 11-6 after the second. Dan McLenaghen had two and four and other double tallies were added by Gerry Van Beck, Barry Mawhinney and Larry Crema. Singles came from Derek Milani, Lyle Robinson, Jim Dorman and Gary Purdon.

Russ Kennedy contributed two and singles went to Will Reid, Ed Van Dyk, Brian Bell, Rhys Wickes, Al Zozula, John Crowther and Jim Lightbody.

Rockies deny rumors of job offer to Brooks

DENVER (AP) — Colorado Rockies officials deny rumors they have offered U.S. Olympic hockey coach Herb Brooks a two-year, $205,000-contract to coach the last-place National Hockey League club.

A St. Paul Pioneer Press story in Saturday's edition quoted an unnamed Denver source, saying the Rockies plan to fire coach Don Cherry if the deal works out.

Brooks would not comment on the report.

Brooks, the former University of Minnesota hockey coach who coached the Olympic team to a gold medal in the Winter Games, recently signed a two-year contract to coach the Davos team of Switzerland for $75,000 a year, tax free, plus expenses.

Rockies president Armand Pohan hung up the telephone at his home when called about the rumor.

Cherry said that since he has a contract for next year, he finds all the talk about hiring Brooks embarrassing.

Vic West, Columbus in final

Victoria West and Vancouver Columbus will meet in the final for the Provincial Cup at Royal Athletic Park, May 24.

Wests, the defending provincial and national champions, edged Victoria Athletics 3-2 in a semifinal match Saturday before about 400 fans at Royal Athletic.

Columbus captured the other berth by defeating Vancouver Firefighters 2-1 Sunday at Vancouver's Empire Stadium.

Athletics were down 3-0 at the 42-minute mark in the first half but refused to crumble.

Both goaltenders — Jim DeGoede of Vic West and Grant Darley of Athletics — were erratic in the first half but settled down after the break.

Striker Robbie Williams fired the first two goals for Wests. He scored the first at 26 minutes after collecting a cross from Dan Henry, who beat Darley to a loose ball at the side of the net after catching the A's netminder out of position. Four minutes later, Wests broke through with a three-on-two situation and Henry drew a defender before slipping a pass to Williams, who scored low and to Darley's right.

Then the A's, who have only lost twice since Christmas, struck back.

Following the break, Athletics kept up the pressure and were rewarded at 51 minutes when Leier took advantage of a sloppy back pass to kick the ball out of DeGoede's grasp and walk it into the net.

Vic West defenders changed their tactics after Leier came close to scoring again about two minutes later on a hard shot from the left side. Instead of passing back to DeGoede, they elected to boot the ball upfield.

"The team has an appetite for winning," said Vic West coach Bob English, "the players always seem to be ready for the big games. We've been playing for nearly 18 months now, with only one month off last year, and yet the enthusiasm is still there."

English had a great deal of praise for the Brian Robinson-coached Athletics, who defeated Vic West in the McGavin Cup and Jackson Cup finals earlier this season and finished in a points tie in league play.

"They never give up, I have a lot of respect for them," he explained.

The winner of the Provincial Cup will represent British Columbia in the Western Canadian championship in Saskatoon, Aug. 22 and 24, and the Western winner advances to the Canadian final Sept. 12-14 in Halifax.

Athletics big winner

Victoria Athletics emerged as the only double winner in seven Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League games Sunday.

Athletics blanked Sooke-Juan de Fuca 5-0 and 2-0 in a doubleheader at Sooke.

In other games, all at Central Park, Port Angeles Budweiser tripped Labatts 11-2 but lost to Tally-Ho 7-2, Port Alberni Athletics downed Royal Oak Inn 4-2 but dropped a 3-1 decision to Ingraham Inn and Seaspray Properties clipped Tod Hackett, 5-2.

On Saturday, Port Alberni downed Port Angeles 4-0 at Central.

Two one-hitters were recorded in the weekend action.

Mel Nelson pitched one Sunday in the 5-0 win by Athletics over Sooke-Juan de Fuca and Port Alberni's Bill Polz, a former Victorian, held Port Angeles to a lone hit Saturday.

Budgets show pluses in openers

Victoria Budget manager Harvey Stevenson looks upon the early going as assessment time.

He's not one to hold back on words either good or bad, but the levelling of criticism hasn't come pouring out because his Northwest Men's Fastball League squad is turning out more plus signs than the minus ones.

- Plus: Budgets' 9-3 and 4-0 sweep of Saturday's doubleheader against Woodinville Lumber at Royal Athletic Park boosted Victoria's won-lost record to 6-2 in the talent-filled international circuit. That kind of record isn't hard to take.
- Plus: While Mark Smith and Dave Wilson are the talented but youthful returnees, newcomer Rob Guenter is ready to apply the steadying influence in the pitching deparment. Merle Bragg's two-out single in the final inning spoiled Guenter's bid for a perfect game but the 4-0 victory was Guenter's second straight shutout.
- Plus: Bob Burrows, the major contributor of over-the-fence blasts in the past, is sidelined with a break in an arm bone but Budgets aren't suffering from the lack of the long ball. Homers by Alden Govenlock and Bob Wilson in the 9-3 romp were Nos. 5 and 6 for the team in only two weekends of action.
- Plus: Newcomers, apart from Guenter, are making their presence felt early. Wilson, moving up from the Stuffy McGinnis League at Central Park, added a two-run triple and a run-scoring double in addition to his two-run homer for five runs-batted-in the Saturday doubleheader.
- Plus: Burrows was expected to be sidelined at least until June but the break is mending very well and he could be back before this month is out.

Despite the piling up of pleasant factors, Stevenson isn't ignoring areas which could use improvement. The most noticeable, he feels, are "defence and more consistent offense, especially in the execution of fundamentals."

Guilty of miscues in all of their previous six games, Budgets looked their best in the field on Saturday. Budgets' only mistake was promptly erased by a snappy double play keyed around the alert thinking of veteran Carl Walker.

Budgets swing back into action Friday and Saturday with a four-game exhibition set against Saskatoon All-o-matic. It is the first of Victoria's "Super Series" exhibition schedule at Royal Athletic Park.

Lift records fall

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Heavyweight Leonid Taranenko of the Soviet Union swept three gold medals and bettered two world records at the European weightlifting championships. Taranenko, 24, a student, lifted 419 pounds in snatch and 926 pounds in the biathlon.

Brentwood crews take six events

Brentwood won six races — boys' heavyweight eights, boys' lightweight singles, boys' heavy fours, senior boys' eights, men's freshmen eights and boys' lightweight eights — and placed third in the boys' heavyweight doubles.

Quebec swimmers extend reign as national synchro champions

KELLY KRYCZKA
. . . aggregate champion

Synchro Elite of Quebec City captured the Canadian synchronized swimming team championship for the third successive year Saturday at Crystal Pool.

Synchro took the crown by edging Calgary Aquabelles, the last club to grab three successive titles (1975 to 1977).

Kelly Kryczka of Calgary won the solo crown after missing out on duets Friday night. The 18-year-old also won the aggregate award for her all-around performances in solo, duet and team events.

Synchro Elite, consisting of Lyne and Lyna Carrier, Nancy Bedard, Martine Simard, Manon Cote, Carolyn Ellis, Louise Perreault and Anne Hebert, performed its championship routine after the Calgary team turned in a score of 96.

The Quebecers topped the competition with a score of 97.143 after executing an eye-catching double lift, in which two members are hoisted competely out of the water while doing the splits.

Club Amateur Montreal Olympique placed third over-all with 174.8753, followed by Vancouver's Aquasonics, who turned in a 170.5763 tally.

Completing the list of teams were Olympium of Ontario (169.4140), Surrey Aquatic Club (162.7935), Synchro Elite's "B" team (160.3640), Saskatoon Aqualenes (159.9775) and Manitoba Aquadians (159.2640).

Kryczka's winning routine earned her a score of 95.571 from the judging panel. Added to her figures score, that taally gaved her a total of 191.8110 points.

She topped the field in both routines and figures, each of which counts for half the championship total. Kryczka was fourth at last year's event.

Lyna Carrier, third in 1979, was close second this time, recording a combined score of 190.5330.

Penny and Vicky Vilagos on the Club Amateur were third and fourth, with combined totals of 186.8890 and 185.4860, respectively.

Two-hit effort wasn't enough

BURNABY — Victoria Merchants dropped a doubleheader to Burnaby 2-1 and 2-0 Sunday after beating Vancouver TOS 4-3 Saturday in Pacific Coast Junior Baseball League play.

Burnaby outhit Victoria 8-4 in the second game and won in the sixth when Mike Michaud cracked a two-out, two-run single.

On Saturday, Gary White connected for a double in the seventh to drive in Victoria's winning tally.

It was the second run-producing double of the game for White. Catcher Bob Godfrey also batted in two runs with a pair of sacrifice flies and Larry Wedgewood earned the pitching decision with a five-hitter.

Merchants are now 6-3 in league play.

Taylor collects second in row

Dale Taylor made it two-for-two Saturday during the stock-car portion of the auto-racing program before 2,842 fans at Western Speedway.

Taylor, driving a 1967 Firebird, won the 35-lap main event for the second straight weekend, doubling his over-all record of last season.

In addition, Taylor set a new track record of 19.59 seconds during time trials. The old mark of 19.67 was set last season by Jim Smith. Mike French also eclipsed the old mark with a time of 19.64.

Taylor took it easy during the first part of the main event but started to move up and reached second spot on the 15th lap. On the next circuit, he zipped out in front and never looked back.

Greg Gicas also started slowly but moved up steadily and edged past French on the 30th lap to take second place. French finished third and Armstrong was fourth.

"MORE THINGS ARE WROUGHT BY PRAYER THAN THIS WORLD DREAMS OF." TENNYSON

CANADA FACES PROBLEMS, AT HOME AND ABROAD, BEYOND HUMAN SOLUTION.

IN TEN YEARS (1970–1980)
we have witnessed an alarming escalation in food shortages, earthquakes, abortions, violence, family break-downs, homosexuality, child abuse and national debt.

JESUS CHRIST PREDICTED:
"Nation will rise against nation... there will be famines and earthquakes... many false prophets will arise and will mislead many, and because lawlessness is increased, most people's love will grow cold." Matthew 24: 7-12

Southam News
"TERRIBLE TREADMILL"
"In Canada the rise in public spending is likely to reach sixty billion this year. The cost of paying interest on the national debt will be more than ten billion."
Consider our unstable economic base and the distress of unemployment.

WARNING FROM SODOM:
She had pride of wealth, and food in plenty, comfort and ease, and yet she never helped the poor and wretched. They grew haughty and did deeds abominable in my sight," says the Lord God. The Prophet Ezekiel

WHY PRAY.

GOD PROMISES
"If my people, which are called by my name, humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their evil ways; then I will hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land." 2 Chronicles 7:14

DR. CHAS MALIK
(Past president of the United Nations General Assembly):
It is given to great people only once in history to help decisively in saving the world. North American Christians have clearly been given this opportunity today. If missed now, it may never be given them again."

BOB DYLAN 1979
"When you gonna wake up, When you gonna wake up and strengthen the things that remain."

WHAT TO PRAY FOR.

QUEBEC REFERENDUM, MAY 20, 1980
For a true spirit of repentance, humility, and forgiveness, because of our responsibility in the present crisis.

INTERNATIONAL DISTRESS AND WORLD COMMUNISM
Alexander Solzhenitsyn, the exiled Russian writer, estimates the "Cost of Socialism" at over 110 million lives. He says, "Communism is unregenerate; it will always present a mortal danger to mankind."

FAMILY LIFE
"Suicide is now the second highest cause of death of the young. Loneliness is a national symptom. People are not just lonely because they are alone, but because they are empty inside, and that comes from not having had a good family life as children." Dr. Harold M. Vigh — Menninger Foundation

ABORTION
"In beautiful British Columbia, one child of every three conceived ends up in our hospital incinerators." Pro-Life Society of B.C.

THE CHURCH
We need to repent of our lack of unity, and our failure to adequately demonstrate to the world the pure compassion and truthfulness of Jesus Christ.

PLEASE PRAY.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	4 NT	Pass
5 ◇	Pass	6 ◇

Opening lead — jack of spades.

One of the most remarkable hands on record is this one which appears in Reese on Play. South makes six diamonds even though West's A-10-8-7 appear to constitute two impregnable trump tricks. Even when you study all four hands, the slam seems impossible to make.

However, the slam can be made with proper play. The hand starts innocently enough when South wins the spade lead with the queen and returns a low diamond. West plays the seven and North the queen, East showing out. Prospects of making the slam, which a moment before had seemed virtually certain, now appear to be virtually nil.

But a little thought reveals that the contract can be made if West has the right distribution. The prospects are not good, but the outlook is not hopeless If West has 4-3-3-3 distribution, the contract is unbeatable.

Accordingly, South cashes the ace of hearts and ruffs a heart, He then enters dummy with a spade and ruffs another heart. The purpose of these ruffs is to reduce South's trump holding to the same length as West's.

Declarer now cashes his last spade and three clubs, winding up in dummy. With everyone down to three cards at this point, North has the king of hearts and K-3 of diamonds, South has the J-9-6 of diamonds, and West has the A-10-8 of diamonds.

Declarer leads the king of hearts from dummy and ruffs it with the jack. West is helpless against this play. If he overruffs with the ace, he is forced to return the ten or eight, and in either cast South scores the nine and the king. If West underuffs the jack, South leads a diamond towards the king, and again West makes only one trump trick.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Charlie started dealing. "Only one game, and the loser pays the winner fifty cents," he said. "If I win I'll have twice as much as you."

"Okay," Paul agreed. "But I'll end up with three times as much as you if I win."

It was hardly a big gamble, but how much did Charlie have?

Lions win rugby tour opener

PORT ELIZABETH, South Africa (Reuter) — The British Lions rugby team came through a torrid match opening its tour of South Africa with a 28-16 win Saturday over Eastern Province. The the Lions lost flanker Stuart Lane and fly-half Gareth Davies to injuries in a whirlwind first half on their way to winning by three tries, two conversions, three penalties and a dropped goal to two tries, one conversion and two penalties.

Saad Muhammad retains boxing title

HALIFAX (CP) — Mathew Saad Muhammad of Philadelphia retained his World Boxing Council light heavyweight championship Sunday afternoon with a fifth-round technical knockout over Louis Pergaud of West Germany.

Muhammad had predicted that he would stop Pergaud in the fourth, but the sixth-ranked challenger stayed on top of the champion in the early rounds.

It was Muhammad's third successful defence of the title he won from Marvin Johnson in Indianapolis last year by a knockout.

In a preliminary bout, Canadian and Commonwealth welterweight champion Clyde Gray had to fight 10 tough rounds to outpoint Mike Herron in a non-title match.

Gray, always a cool customer in the ring, threw everything in his wide repertory of punches at Herron, but did not knock the Memphis fighter down.

CALGARY — Scarborough Titans downed defending-champion Victoria "Y" Capitals 15-11, 10-15, 15-12 to win the women's title Sunday at the Canadian juvenile volleyball championships.

The Victorians, who defeated the Titans in last year's final, reached Sunday's title match with a 15-7, 15-6 win over Calgary in Saturday's semi-finals.

The third-place bronze medal was picked up by the Kildonan team from Manitoba.

In the men's final, Scarborough Starbucks beat B.K.'s South Arm Smashers — from Vancouver — 14-16, 15-2, 15-6. Third place went was captured by Calgary Dinosaurs.

Awards were made to the top performers of the three-day championship.

Janice Paxton of Victoria was selected as the most-valuable female player. All-star members chosen included Heidi Bauer and Wanda Guenett of Kildonan, Joan Buck of Newfoundland Memorial, Suzette Smith of Calgary Volleyball Club and Andrea Williams and Alison Noble of Ontario Titans.

On the men's side, Eddy Drakich of Scarborough Starbucks was chosen most-valuable player. All-star squad selection was earned by Roger Morito from Starbucks, Brad Willock and Chris Frehlich of the Smashers, Serge Turcot of Quebec International from Montreal, Russ Poffenroth of Dinosaurs and Dave Samek of Ontario's North York Huskies.

Scott sets meet mark at relays

VANCOUVER — Debbie Scott of the University of Victoria set a meet record at the Vancouver Relays on Saturday, winning the 1,500 metres in four minutes, 19.3 seconds.

Scott broke her own record of 4:20.9 that she established last year.

Brent Fougner of Victoria Track Club came second in the triple jump with a lead of 14.58 metres.

Pat Wellman of Victoria finished fourth in the women's high jump; Tom Michel of Victoria Mercuries was fifth in the 800 metres; and Cathy D'Arcy of UVic was fifth in the 1,500.

Gordon Head gets first win

Victoria blanked Saanich 30-0 and Gordon Head scored it first victory by tripping Juan de Fuca 7-1 in Hornets Peewee Football League play Saturday at Glanford Park.

The Victoria club expanded its lead with a 7-1-0 record and is followed by Juan de Fuca (4-4-0), Saanich (3-4-1) and Gordon Head (1-6-1).

Scoring:

LOS ANGELES (CP) — Angella Taylor of Toronto won the women's 200 metres by over four-tenths of second, finishing at 22.9, at the UCLA Invitational track meet Sunday.

Taylor led a group of four Canadians, who put in strong performances at meets in California on the weekend. Another Toronto native Milt Ottey tied for second with Rory Kotinek of the Pacific Coast Club in the high jump with a leap of 2.13 metres.

Vancouver's Anne Mackie-Morelli came in third in the 800 metres with a time of 2:04.60, finishing two seconds behind winner Essie Kelly. And Brit McRoberts of Coquitlam placed third in the women's 1500 metres at 4:13.5, four seconds behind winner Brenda Webb.

Scott, premier miler in the United States, took the lead immediately and stayed there, opening a huge gap in the final lap.

His time, the fastest in the world this year, was more than two seconds better than runner-up Eamonn Coghlan of Ireland, who was clocked in 3:55.2. Steve Lacy was third in 3:55.7.

Foster, who had lost his last 11 meetings with Nehemiah, broke in front out of the blocks in the 110-metre hurdles then roared away from the fading Nehemiah midway throught the race. The winning time was 13.27 seconds. Dedy Cooper was second in 13.43, Rod Milburn third in 13.54 and Nehemiah fourth in 13.77.

"It was my most satisfying win ever," said Foster, who last beat Nehemiah in 1978 and has now beaten him just three times in 14 outdoor meetings.

Other outstanding performances included James Sanford's 10.02 clocking in the 100 metres, best in the world this year, and Willie Banks's triple jump of 17.07 metres-6.99 centimetres (56 feet-2¾ inches), also a 1980 world best.

Port au Prince's archbishop, trying to still the wagging tongues in the Roman Catholic nation, says it's perfectly all right for Haiti's portly dictator to marry a divorced woman. Archbishop Francois Wolff Lingonde issued a statement explaining 27-year-old Michelle Bennet, a mother of two, betrothed to "President-for-life" Jean-Claude Duvalier, was never really married. Lingonde, who also happens to be the bride-to-be's cousin, said the lady's previous marriage does not exist in the eyes of the Roman Catholic church because she is Anglican and her former husband, a Catholic, did not seek a dispensation from the church to marry her in an Anglican ceremony.

Duvalier

The Duchess of Windsor, 87, has been hospitalized for an undisclosed illness. Born Bessie Wallis Warfield, but known to millions as Wallis Simpson, she has been bedridden at her Paris home for the past three years, and friends say she has never recovered from the death in 1972 of the Duke of Windsor, who stepped down as king to marry her. Doctors have recently tried to keep most visitors away because the excitement of talking, often about her former social life, caused her blood pressure to rise.

Paul Geidel was just 17 when he was convicted of murder in 1911. Today, he is a free man after spending 68 years and seven months in jail — apparently the longest term ever served in the U.S. "No publicity, please," the 85-year-old Geidel said with a smile as he left Fishkill correctional facility in New York for his new home — a nursing home. Geidel, a native of Hartford, Conn., was working as a porter in a hotel in New York City when he attempted to rob Henry Jackson. When the man awoke and began struggling, he was knocked unconscious and Geidel stuffed a rag soaked with chloroform into his mouth and fled. Jackson died of asphyxiation. "Geidel was forgotten," said parole officer Robert Foley. "He got lost. He's a real nice old guy, he's always very polite. We just want to give him a chance to socialize with people his own age."

West German industrialist Roland Zarwasch left a wallet containing $2,000 lying on a commuter train seat in Toronto but has it returned by Susan Lang of Oakville. "Susan Lang reaffirms my belief in the goodness of people," Zarwasch said.

Dear Abby:

My wife and I have been married for 69 years. I am 93 and she is 90. Before we were married, Myrtis and I "went together" for almost a year. In all that time she never found out whether I was a "poor lover" or a great one. My work took me out of town from Monday through Friday, so we spent our Saturday evenings together in her parents' home (in the "parlor") often with either one or both parents present. Sometimes the two of us would enjoy a meal in a deluxe restaurant.

Sunday mornings we always went to church together. Myrtis sang in the choir. So did I until they found out what was the matter with the choir--then I didn't sing there anymore.

We fell in love, but not the way they do today. Not so much as a good-night kiss before we became engaged. When I asked her to marry me, after much pleading on my part she finally said yes. Then I took her in my arms and planted a big kiss right on her lips. And that was it. No more than a hug and a kiss until we were married some two months later.

Well, I guess I turned out to be a pretty fair lover. We had five children, 17 grandchildren and 28 great-grandchildren.

You may want to put this in your "My, how times have changed" file. Anyway, Myrtis joins me in sending you our love and appreciation.

Elias P.

Dear Elias:

Thanks for a wonderful column piece. Your letter was a real "upper."

Dear Abby:

I can't believe that you aren't aware that most married women consider every single attractive female a threat to their marriages.

For your amusement, when I became a widow, a married woman whom I had know only slightly called to tell me that she was beside herself with grief because her husband's doctor had told her that her husband might go "any minute." But, of course she was not allowed to tell him.

Well, today — seven years later — the husband is still hale, hearty and thriving.

Very clever, wouldn't you say?

Bert

Dear Bert:

Yes, and also devious.

Dear Abby:

When kissing, should one quit breathing? I heard "smack" sounds are out when kissing a boy, but OK for relatives. And am I supposed to move my head? Or just my lips? What am I supposed to do with my nose?

Never Been Kissed

Dear Never:

You should not quit breathing. No "smack" sounds — not even with relatives. It's not necessary to move anything. And all you do with your nose is breathe through it.

A sacrament of bread, wine and salmon

When the congregation of lovely little Quadra Island United Church at Cape Mudge Village takes Communion an extra element is added to the Sacrament. There is bread to represent the body of Christ, there is wine for His blood and there is also salmon.

Salmon remains the staff of life for the proud and enterprising Kwakiutl people of Cape Mudge. It is the mainstay of their feasts.

A week or two ago, when the villagers invited Campbell River dwellers to a church bazaar, smoke from a barbecueing pit rose in a lazy blue drift above the foreshore.

Win and I trudged across the green grass of spring to the pit, a long trench filled with burning, cedar drift from the beach. Around the lip of the pit, 24 yew-wood posts, each split to receive a whole spring salmon wired in a frame of cedar splints, leaned toward the fire.

The heat was intense. The salmon, each opened out to the size and shape of a snowshoe, dripped and spat their rich oil.

The men in charge of the cooking tended the salmon with finicky care, turning one stake so that the fish would be more fully exposed to the heat, and easing another back a few inches so that its succulent slab would not cook beyond the right golden-brown shade that signifies good eating.

We watched for a while, g[illegible] hungrier by the minute. Then we remembered that this was, after all, a bazaar, and went off in search of the inevitable white elephant stall.

Purpose of the bazaar was to raise funds to go toward the restoration of the church — named Walker Memorial after the pioneer missioner who founded it — which has served the Quadra Island community for more than 100 years.

The work, we found when we looked in on the church, is well along. Already, the new stained-glass window which is to be its showpiece has been installed.

Although money-raising was the reason for the gathering, it is a strange Indian assembly in which giving doesn't play a part. This one was no exception. There was a presentation to be made to the Rev. Ron Atkinson, minister of Walker Memorial.

The Rev. Ron is a burly, husky Islander who could pass for a fisherman himself. Two years ago he left Quadra Island and Walker Memorial with his wife, Donna, and two sons to take over the pulpit of St. Giles United in Vancouver.

But Ron Atkinson was sorely missed by the Cape Mudge people. They asked him if he would return to be their pastor again. So in July of 1979, he came back to his old pastorate, and in appreciation, the villagers were about to give him a thank-you present.

On the bighouse stage Chief Harry Assu and Chief James Sewid unfurled a ceremonial blanket robe of navy trimmed with red.

Of all such robes we've been privileged to see, this was the most magnificent. It was bordered with a design lavishly worked in pearl buttons. On its back was a lordly double-headed Kwakiutl eagle.

While the two chiefs and Mrs. Ida Assu, representing the band artists who had crafted the robe, stood smiling by, the Rev. Ron tried the garment on.

It happened, he said, that the device of the eagle was singularly appropriate, since the eagle was prominent on his Scottish family crest.

It is the hope of the people, said Chief Sewid, that he will wear the robe while dispensing the bread, the wine and the salmon of Communion.

All in all, a very good day, with a feast of barbecued salmon to highlight it. We ate ours with a gentle Kwakiutl lady for company.

"You know," she said, with a glance at the foreshore and the ridges swelling protectively behind it, "I love this place. I always feel different when I'm here."

A sentiment which we could very easily understand!

Era's relics escape ruin

By PAUL MINVIELLE

Seeing a beautiful building fall before a wrecker's ball can be a painful experience. That's why Bob Wise was happy to get a chance to preserve the "frosting" off an architectural cake from another era, the old Capitol Theatre at Yates and Blanshard.

"It's a once-in-a-lifetime experience saving things like this that would otherwise be destroyed," Wise said.

He and his partners in the restoration firm of Waterglass Studio — his brother Dave, silversmith Ian Rossiter and plaster restoration expert Pat Bulmer — are happy not only because of a chance to save unique architectural ornamentation.

They're also looking forward to reproducing many of the intricate trimmings used to decorate ceilings and walls so the designs can be incorporated into restored and new buildings.

So far the 60-year-old structure has yielded stained glass windows, a seven-foot high chandelier and antique lighting fixtures, elaborate urns and pots and a variety of ornamental trimmings.

Wise said the trickiest part of the job so far was lowering the stained glass windows from a high precarious perch to ground level.

All plaster work is reinforced with horsehair, a mixed blessing to those removing moldings. It holds plaster together well. On the other hand it's tough to cut and it doesn't come away easily.

One of the prizes is the huge rosette that once formed the centre of the 60-foot-diameter dome in the theatre foyer.

It was from this rosette that the main chandelier hung. It could be raised and lowered by a winch which is still in place but is due to be removed.

Pharmacare rule tests seniors' loyalty

By DR. BOB YOUNG

Little things sometimes weigh heavily on peoples' minds, and rules and regulations designed with the best of intentions may cause unforseeable distress.

A case in point is the mechanism designed by Pharmacare a few years ago to distribute and document medications used by residents of nursing homes. The purpose was to increase the efficiency of drug dispensing and delivery and to maintain a drug profile on each patient.

A profile consists of a list of drugs being used at present, or prescribed in the past. This information is usually stored in a computer. At regular intervals the list is printed and sent to the patient's physician for review and revision.

In addition each nursing home is assigned to a pharmacy — and a pharmacist is selected as the professional person responsible for periodically assessing the drugs used in the nursing home.

In the interest of efficiency all the drugs are supposed to be supplied by one pharmacy.

All this is commendable and undoubtedly serves a useful function. Many elderly people are taking a greater variety or larger doses of medication than they need, and for this and other reasons a degree of control is often beneficial.

Elderly people are often fiercely loyal, and several of my patients take exception to being deprived of a choice of pharmacist. This would seem to be a minor point, and Pharmacare cannot be faulted for not thinking of it.

It looms large in the eyes of some patients, however. They may have dealt with the same pharmacist for years or decades. Often the neighborhood druggist has become a good friend and confidant and the older patient feels that he is breaking that trust by taking his or her custom elsewhere, even if it is unwillingly.

These patients may insist that I give them a written prescription rather than phoning it to the nursing home. They will then ride for miles by bus or taxi to have it filled by their 'own' pharmacist.

This defeats the best-laid plans of Pharmacare. The question is — does it really matter?

Calico dress popularity spans century

Another in the series of Patterns from Times Past by Folkwear, is this charming Calico Day Dress. Most common in cotton calico throughout the 1890s and into the 1900s, there were many versions available. This was the dress turn-of-the-century women wore as they lingered over breakfast — before they struggled into their corsets. The soft pleats and shaped shoulder yokes, often with wide ruffles, were trademarks of the 'wrapper', which was priced by the dozen in Montgomery Ward's famous catalog of merchandise of 1895. They were made in cashmere or wool and worn to afternoon tea. They were even used as a mourning dress made up in either black or black prints. Many were trimmed with fancy braids and laces.

Today, the Calico Day Dress is lovely made in cotton, silk, or challis, for work or evening, and is just as attractive when shortened to street length. The pattern may also be cut as a blouse. Klondikers Take Note: This would be an ideal dress to wear for Edmonton's Klondike Days. It fits all sizes from small (6-8) to large (14-16). The dress is no problem when dancing; the fitted skirt falls to a wide flounce at the ankle. You could make a parasol to match, a drawstring bag, and a crocheted shawl for chilly evenings. You'll have fun designing and making this day dress, whether it's for daytime or evening wear!

Happenings: 'New Quilt Shop: For those who are travelling this summer, check out Betty Hoffman's newest venture in Parkway Village at 8170-50th Street (at the edge of Edmonton on the way towards Sherwood Park). It is gathered around the yoke, with optional tucks and lace insertion. Traditionally high-waisted in back, with three-quarter length sleeves and back opening, it is lovely worn over a skirt or may be cut long to tuck in. $7.20; 'No. 207 Kinsale Cloak — top off your new outfit with a romantic, full length cloak with hood. Very feminine hood may be worn over the shoulders as a cape, or pulled up and fitted over the head with ties. The full-size pattern makes ankle-length garment on a 5'7'' person. Lined and gathered into a wide collar, it falls in unpressed pleats to a curved hem. $7.20.

Seniors eager to go to school

"There is nothing more remarkable in the life of Socrates than that he found time in his old age to learn to dance and play on instruments and thought it time well spent," wrote French essayist Montaigne.

Dr. Terry Hawkins uses this quote to head up his revealing study of what seniors really want in the field of continuing education.

In a survey of some 600 older citizens (living in the Northumberland and Newcastle district of Ontario) Dr. Hawkins found that 80 per cent of those reporting would welcome an opportunity to again become involved with schools in some way.

An amazing 98 per cent said they considered learning to be a lifetime project. "Experts" who plan and present programs for older folk which see them sitting on the sidelines and being entertained by others should note that figure.

Chief areas of education of interest to those taking part in the survey were (in descending order of preference): Travel tips and topics, Canadian politics, hobby classes, health for seniors including cooking and nutrition classes, how to enjoy retirement, senior citizens and the law, making the most of retirement income (investments after retirement, living on a pension), music appreciation, consumer skills for older adults.

Twenty-three per cent opted for bridge and other card games; 20 per cent wanted a course in protecting themselves from con artists; 17 per cent wanted Bible studies (plugging for their finals, one wag said).

In addition, some wanted "keep fit" classes (along with bicycle and walking paths) and further instruction in a wide range of activities and subjects: Speed reading, hairdressing, historical research, gardening, art, creative writing, environmental matters, golf, psychology, square dancing, languages and typing.

Society may want to segregate seniors but the Hawkins survey shows that some 70 per cent of oldsters would prefer to take courses with persons of varying ages, not just with other seniors. This same attitude prevailed in respect to instructors; they wanted capable teachers of any age, younger or older than themselves.

Seniors want to be useful — to serve as well as be served. The survey also asked "Would you like to become involved in the instruction side in local schools?" Some 60 per cent offered to listen to children reading; 58 per cent were ready to show youngsters a craft or skill they knew well; over 50 per cent would work with troubled children.

elizabeth forbes

Right now Jack Wallace, Don Oliver and Ken Hurn, all have the same absorbing interest.

They are working, with others, to assure success of an Oak Bay High reunion (May 30, 31 and June 1), the first since the school opened back in 1915, in an old building on Oak Bay Avenue, where the present Municipal Hall stands today.

Wallace joined the teaching staff in 1937, a few years after a move was made to a new school on Cranmore Road.

He became vice-principal in 1953 and then principal, a title he held until retirement in 1970.

Hurn was a student in Oak Bay High when Wallace was there. He went on to teach and become a vice-principal in various schools and is now principal of Hillcrest Elementary.

Oliver was also a student during the Wallace years. He joined the teaching staff in 1949 and taught there for 21 years with only one brief break.

He retired as vice-principal in 1970 to become assistant director of curriculum with the provincial ministry of education.

All three tell you the reunion will be a weekend filled with fun and meaningful activitities.

There will be coffee and tea and wine and cheese parties in the school building; archives and memorabilia on display; class reunions, a pioneer tea, indoor and outdoor sports featuring teams of the past and possibly some participation in the Oak Bay Tea Party, scheduled for the same weekend.

Biggest event will be a ceremonial and dance in the Victoria Memorial Arena with Oliver as master of ceremonies and the entertainment featuring Oak Bay High's 65 years.

The reunion will conclude with church parades and a pancake brunch at the school.

In a more reminiscent mood, this dedicated trio speaks of the growth and the successes they have seen and participated in over the years.

When Wallace joined the staff 300 students were registered in four grades; when he left, that number had increased to 1,200 in two grades, with the other two taken into a junior high program.

In 1958 he saw a gymnasium, industrial arts and home economics space and a science lab added to the Cranmore Road school; in 1964 more industrial space and a new commerce wing and in 1968, a cinder track.

He points out that during the past 30 to 40 years, Oak Bay High has ranked right up at the top not only in the province but across Canada, and its students have taken first place many times in provincial school examinations.

"Throughout those years there has also been a tremendous school spirit amongst staff and students and we've had any number of teachers coach teams and sponsor various clubs in after-school hours.

Looking back he points to students who were successful in Olympic aquatic and track and field competitions and to others who competed in Canadian championships and won awards in basketball, aquatics and track and field.

He tells you of the 19 provincial championships that have come to the school for boys' basketball, track and field, rugby, swimming, girls' field hockey and soccer, the most recent a week ago when the rugby team took the play-off against North Kamloops.

"First school motto was Play The Game," Hurn recalls, "and students have always played the game, not only in athletics but in academics and in public service, especially in the last world war."

Oliver points out that drama and theatre groups have been very active in the school and they too, have won their share of awards.

"Oak Bay High has had many plays selected for honor performances in Victoria drama festivals and its students have won best actor and actress awards.

He also speaks of the popular television program Reach For The Top in which school teams participate.

And he tells you with considerable pride that in 1968, one of those teams won the Canadian championship.

There was praise too, from all three men, for the school band program.

"It took off in earnest in 1964," Hurn says, "and since then succeeding bands have made successful tours of Japan in Expo year, Europe, Hawaii, Disneyland, across Canada and into the States of Washington and Oregon."

When the move to Cranmore Road was made in 1930, industrial arts and home economics remained in the old school for a time because of space limitations. And the bell stayed there, too.

In 1978, when junior and senior high schools were amalgamated with the name of Oak Bay Secondary School, the bell was offered for its archives.

Les Grands sparks love affair

by AUDREY JOHNSON

After being thoroughly enchanted by Les Grands Ballets Canadiens Sunday at the Royal Theatre, the question of the hour is no longer "can French Canada do without the rest of us," but rather can the rest of us do without French Canada?

So much charm and spirit, such elegance and polish is a cultural phenomenon. It certainly does not appear every season from whatever source, at home or abroad.

The company will dance the same program in a second and final performance tonight.

The dancing of this youthful handsome company created an instant love affair with Sunday's audience. It inspired a demonstration of rhythmic clapping, shouted bravos and finally a standing ovation that brought an encore and a responding ovation from the dancers for the audience.

Les Grands Ballets breathes forth the essence of Montreal, Canada's most cosmopolitan city. Its work is eclectic; capable of pure classicism, of superb modern style and, in its justly acclaimed Tam Ti Delam, a distillation of Quebecois folk elements presented with tremendous panache.

The evening begins with the traditional beauty of Les Sylphides. Staged by Fernand Nault, one of two resident choreographers, it adheres to the choreography of Michel Fokine. The taped orchestra — indeed throughout the evening — is better than average, and the dancers, from principals to corps de ballet, perform with a high degree of delicacy and precision, displaying a rare sensitivity in interpreting the Chopin music.

Jerilyn Dana's Mazurka is exquisite in its buoyancy and perfection of line and the final Valse Brillante, while a display piece for the whole company and revealing virtuoso attributes of all the principals, retains its classic purity.

Stravinsky's ballet masterpiece, Firebird, follows and is, from many points of view, the most impressive work on the program. Its late 20th century choreography by Maurice Bejart, differs strongly from the original Diaghilev, but whether or not one has seen that version, this is exciting, powerful work.

The superior quality of the male principals dominates here; the finely tuned, athletic dancing of Rey Dizon and Claude Freva; bravura performances that are also intensely expressive of the music and the spiritual significance of the Firebird.

Choreographed by Brian Macdonald, a renowned Canadian choreographer who is resident with the company, Tam Ti Delam will be performed for the 200th time this season.

Understandably it is a high favorite wherever, in Canada, the United States, Europe, it has been seen. The delightful music is by Quebec's poet laureate, Gilles Vigneault and the whole work is full of joy, vitality and an abandon that cloaks the fine discipline of this mature yet young company.

Jacques St.Cyr as the square dance caller in plaid shirt, tapping up a storm when he is not singing in his rocking chair, is surrounded by the dancers en pointe, vividly yet subtly representing in costume detail and in movement, the dance traditions of French Canada.

Again there is virtuosity and strength as the men vie to out-exploit each other, and grace, lightness and breath-taking animation in the female performances.

U.S. allows foreign boats in Alaska salmon surplus

JUNEAU (AP) — Alaska officials, bracing for a record salmon harvest in Bristol Bay this summer, will allow Canadian tenders inside Alaskan waters to take salmon from the fishing grounds.

The provision for tenders from Canada and others was laid down in an emergency order signed Friday by Ronald Skoog, Alaska's fish and game commissioner.

Foreign tenders normally are not permitted inside Alaskan waters but officials are looking for an outlet for the anticipated record harvest.

The action had been recommended by the state Board of Fisheries and a governor's committee studying the Bristol Bay surplus.

State officials forecast a record harvest of about 37 million fish this summer — about 3.2 million more fish than processors a few months ago indicated they could handle.

The processors' estimates were made before New England Fish Company declared bankruptcy and closed its 11 plants in Alaska.

The emergency order still means that U.S. fishermen must sell their catch to U.S. processors. But it allows processors to take the fish to the foreign tenders, which in turn can move outside the 200-mile limit and process the salmon, or transport it to other countries.

Sen. Clem Tillion, North Pacific Fisheries Management Council chairman, said he expects Canada will handle some of the surplus fish.

It was not immediately known whether other foreign nations would be interested in purchasing the fish. Some European nations had indicated an interest in harvesting some of the Bristol Bay salmon,

Toxic flotsam curbs demanded

OTTAWA (CP) — Children and boaters are in danger of being killed or seriously injured by explosions of chemicals which washed up on the British Columbia coast last week, New Democratic MP Jim Fulton (Skeena) said today.

Speaking in the Commons, he urged the government to introduce a West Coast marine pollution act this year to force American companies which ship dangerous chemicals along the British Columbia coast to notify the government of any spills.

Outside the Commons, Fulton said a refrigerated container holding 80 drums, each containing about 245 litres of chemicals, was washed overboard in a storm last fall near the Queen Charlotte Islands. But the responsible American company didn't tell the government until last week.

He said bright-red drums containing Excide 320, an agent that destroys bacteria and explodes at 28.3 degrees C now are floating freely.

The shiny red drums now washing up on beaches might attract small children or boaters who "could be blown up or seriously hurt," Fulton said.

Environment Minister John Roberts said the government does not plan to introduce a West Coast pollution act this year, but might incorporate it in a transportation of hazardous products bill now before the Commons.

Log dump, camp water stir up-island citizens

DUNCAN — The effects of log dumping practices in Burgoyne Bay and an application for a water licence at Camp Quanoes have upset residents of the two areas.

Maple Bay ratepayers have complained to MLA Hugh Curtis about log dumping and storage along both sides of Burgoyne Bay and along the Salt Spring Island shoreline.

"Our beaches are being continually battered and littered and boating made more and more hazardous by deadheads, floating logs and general debris," the ratepayers say.

Lands, Parks and Housing Minister James Chabot recently turned down an application for a foreshore lease at Welbury Bay on Salt Spring because of the damage it would cause. It was decided to appropriate Burgoyne Bay as an alternate site.

The ratepayers want to know what steps Curtis plans to alleviate the damage this decision is causing to the waters of North Cowichan.

Meanwhile, an application by the Convention of Regular Baptist Churches of British Columbia for a licence for extended water privileges has met with strong opposition from area residents. The water, to service a new campsite at Camp Quanoes near Crofton, would come from Keating Creek.

Residents who draw on Keating Creek pointed out in a letter to North Cowichan Council that 4,400 gallons of water daily is drawn from the creek under existing licences and the proposed licence would increase this to 6,400 gallons a day.

Residents fear a water shortage to private residences if North Cowichan grants the licence.

309 IN MEMORIAM

BUGG — In loving memory of Robert who passed away March 1, 1975.

To hear his voice to see his smile,
To sit an talk to him awhile,
To be together in the same old way,
Would be our dearest wish today.
Dear Lord, forgive a silent tear,
A constant wish that he were here.
Others are taken, yes we know,
But he was ours, and we loved him so.

DAVIES - In loving memory of Ernest.

Oh, what would I give to clasp his hand,
His dear, kind face to see;
To hear his voice, to see his smile,
That meant so much to me.
His spirit has fled, his sufferings o'er;
At the fireside he will join us no more.

DUBOIS - In loving memory of Dad, Amedee, who passed away May 18, 1959, Mother, Rose, passed away May 12, 1976 and brothers Roland, June 4, 1965 and Hank, May 17, 1977.

Peacefully sleeping, resting at last,
The world's weary troubles and trials are past,
In silence they suffered, in patience they bore,

KILBURN - In loving memory of our Great Grandmother, Grandmother and Mother, Mary Ellen who passed away May 12, 1975.

No thought for self but loving care,
For others was her way;
And we'll miss her here on earth,

Low humidity creates extra work

hilda beastall

Benefits from dry spring months, April and May, often balance the work of watering so early in the year. Seed rows have been difficult to keep damp long enough for complete germination, and emerging seedlings have needed constant attention as a result of low humidity and wind drying the soil surface. And not many of us have watered the section where we intend to plant tomatoes, squash and other tender vegetables at the end of this month.

Beans and sweet corn need damp soil for germinating and moisture below to draw on without cooling the root area constantly with applied artificial watering.

We are having to mix more humus into the growing rows as we prepare them for sowing and setting out plants, followed by deep watering at least once a week until only a few days before using the lot.

Meanwhile there is an antidote to this extra care in the enjoyment of the several ornamental plants that are thriving in the dry weather even though hot sunshine has not yet been an additional factor.

The pink wands of Tamarix are about to burst into their mist of color and the evergreen Ceanothus dentatus species that we have has never lasted longer in bloom than this year.

These two shrubs come from quite opposite locations, the Tamarix from sandy hills above the Mediterranean, and Ceanothus from the hills of the Southern Californian coast. This would indicate that we have had just about the right amount of humidity for them without actual rain showers.

It is still early to speculate about whether the Phormium tenax will bloom this year. This is the New Zealand-flax which made such a spectacular display on the huge plant down in Saxe Point Park — two years ago, I believe. It needs hot sunshine as well as a somewhat dry soil to induce blooming. It is not commonly seen here in flower because of too little heat in summer. It also needs humidity, as it grows on New Zealand hillsides where moisture would be free in the air from the ocean even in the rainless period.

New Zealand-flax slightly resembles a young yucca with its broad strong leaves, but they lack the dagger ends and may be either green, bronzy green, or variegated with cream.

The various yellow brooms are lovely this year. The early Cytisus praecox is still making fine boundary markers for parking lots and soon the many hybrids with red, bronze, pinkish, yellow or brown flowers will be seen. These are all ideal for local gardens with sandy soils that are difficult to keep sufficiently moist for the more leafy plants to flourish. Small plants grown from the cutting stage in containers will become established readily when planted on gently sloping ground in full sun. In the early years of flowering, they should have the old flowered parts cut off immediately the blooms fade. New shoots are ready to grow during the hot summer days to increase the size of the plant each year.

Other gardens will have other shrubs that are doing very well in these weeks of dry weather, wind and low humidity, and they all add up to the fact that more kinds of plants will thrive in gardens on this part of Vancouver Island than in other sections of this country.

Meanwhile, for the moisture-needing plants, use water carefully without waste, getting it down into the soil where it can be picked up by roots. Water is a precious commodity and is not inexhaustible.

Anti-gays move fails

VANCOUVER (CP) — A move to refuse ordination to homosexuals was defeated by a vote of 500-50 by delegates attending the B.C. conference of the United Church of Canada Saturday.

The motion, which would have placed the conference on record as opposing homomsexuals becoming ministers, would also have made church membership for gays illegal, said Ralph Milton, a Kelowna delegate:

"If we're going to be consistent, we should also then rule that no homosexuals should be admitted to the Christian church."

The delegates also supported a resolution stating a medical abortion may be less evil than some of the alternatives.

Soviet oil industry aiming for export

Times News Services

MALMOE, Sweden — The Soviet Union is carrying out a radical reform of its oil industry which will make it a net exporter of oil throughout the coming decade, a report published here today says.

Petrostudies, a Swedish research company specializing in monitoring the Russian petroleum industry, said the reform means a new economic approach to exploiting mineral resources in the Soviet Union, a drastic increase in domestic prices for crude oil and more efficient exploitation of oil fields.

The new policies, based on a planning document which came into effect last November, will end "30 years of systematic underexploitation of oilfields," the 260-page report said.

The increase in the price of crude, which had remained stable for 13 years at the equivalent of $2.75 (U.S.) a barrel, probably would not be passed to consumers but might be reflected in a decreased profit margin in the refining industry.

Raising this price and the reference price — the price planners figure when deciding how to develop fields — would lead to the more complete exploitation of reserves, the report said.

One result would be more wells per oilfield, meaning the Soviet Union would depend less on imported U.S.-made high capacity well pumps for its relatively few wells. This dependency has become politically unacceptable, the firm said.

Whether or not new fields were found "Soviet oil production need not fall below its present level until 18 to 31 years from now, after reaching a 10-year plateau at a substantially higher level than at present," a Petrostudies statement said.

Meanwhile, an authoritative oil newsletter said Sunday that OPEC ministers failed to agree on a long-term oil price strategy because Iran, Algeria and Libya insisted on a formula that would send crude oil rates "sky high."

The Middle East Economic Survey, in a dispatch from Taif, Saudi Arabia where the ministers met last week in special session, said the three hardliners opposed the draft strategy plan calling for "gradual increases" in the price of crude sold by the 13-member Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Arab exiles fail to move Israelis

The Los Angeles Times

AMMAN, Jordan — In a briefly dramatic and emotional confrontation, three exiled Palestinian officials marched to the Jordan River Sunday and asked Israel to let them return home. But they were turned away in the middle of the bridge.

The officials, Mayor Fahd Kawasmeh of Hebron, Mayor Mohammed Milhem of nearby Halhoul and Moslem religious judge Rajab Tamini of Hebron, were expelled from the Israeli-occupied West Bank 10 days ago, after Palestinian guerrillas killed six Jewish settlers in Hebron, one of the main West Bank towns.

On Sunday, they went with a small band of relatives and supporters down to the small green creek that is the Jordan River and tried to cross the wooden Allenby Bridge from the Arab-held East Bank to the Israeli-held west.

They got exactly halfway across.

In the middle, Israeli soldiers had placed a small steel barrier about three feet high.

And the exiled Palestinians, who admit that they were looking for a confrontation, got one.

Kawasmeh, a short, round, white-haired man, begged in Hebrew, English and Arabic to be allowed across. He read out parts of a UN Security Council resolution urging Israel to allow the three men to return to their homes. Excerpts from the UN text were painted on a 12-foot banner carried by some of the demonstrators.

The Palestinians' temper rose. Kawasmeh and Milhem began to shout. "This is my land," Kawasmeh said. Milhem, a younger and more athletic man, tried to leap the barricade, and was pushed back by the Israelis. Arabs threw punches, then swung the staves they had brought to carry their banners. The Israelis swung back with nightsticks.

At last, an Israeli colonel defused the standoff by promising that if the Palestinians got off the bridge, the Israeli military governor of the West Bank, Gen. Benjamin Ben-Eliezer, might come to hear their plea. The Palestinians retreated, but Ben-Eliezer never showed.

Back in Amman, the three Palestinians returned to something of a hero's welcome. They were welcomed and embraced by Jordan's King Hussein — a measure of Jordan's somewhat ticklish position on the West Bank, which Hussein still claims as Jordanian territory while saying that only the Palestine Liberation Organization can represent the inhabitants.

But all three appeared more interested in the concrete problem of returning to their towns than in the ancient debating points of the Israeli-Arab conflict.

"If the Israelis will not accept a Security Council resolution to let three people back in," Kawasmeh said, "do you think they would ever respect a Security Council decision to give the Palestinian people their rights? Impossible."

Bridge debris dredged for bodies

Times News Services

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — A huge floating crane was to pry apart more of the mangled wreckage beneath the Sunshine Skyway Bridge today in a grim search for additional victims buried in the murky waters of Tampa Bay.

Divers found seven trapped bodies Sunday — and another was found today — bringing to 26 the number recovered since a freighter rammed the bridge Friday during a blinding morning squall.

Officials said at least four Canadians, thought to be from St. John's, Nfld., were believed among the victims.

Smashed remains of a bus, which carried 23 people, were hoisted from the pile of steel girders and chunks of concrete as salvage operations began Sunday. Cables were hooked to the rear axle and as the bus was slowly lifted, two bodies floated free.

Underneath, divers found a car they didn't know was tangled in the twisted rubble. Two bodies were wedged inside the submerged vehicle, which had to be cut open after it was raised to a barge.

Tampa Bay harbor pilot John Lerro was guiding the Summit Venture through the 182-metre-wide shipping channel when it hit the bridge. The coast guard said he had been involved in two other accidents in the last five months.

The state board of pilot commissioners, which licenses harbor pilots, will begin an investigation into the accident this week. The other two incidents are still being investigated, Lewis said.

Soviets whalers defied IWC ban

VANCOUVER (CP) — Soviet whaling fleets caught sperm whales in the north Pacific late last year in defiance of a strict moratorium by the International Whaling Commission, internal commission documents show.

The documents also show a whaling fleet — its nationality unknown — has caught 526 killer whales in the Antarctic up to March 1 this year.

A Jan. 8, 1980 circular from IWC secretary Dr. Ray Gambell to commissioners and contracting governments contains an exchange of strongly-worded telegrams between Gambell and the Soviet fisheries ministry in Moscow.

A senior Soviet fisheries official named R. G. Novochado told the IWC Dec. 5 the whaling fleet had been ordered to stop taking sperm whales but by then the Soviets had already been catching the mammals in the eastern north Pacific for about three weeks.

Monitors on hand at N-plant spill

RUSSELLVILLE, Ark. (UPI) — An Environmental Protection Agency team arrived today to monitor the cleanup of 42,000 gallons of radioactive water spilled at a nuclear power plant.

The state Health Department asked the EPA for backup personnel and equipment, which arrived from the EPA's Montgomery, Ala., office, said Frank Wilson, director of health protection.

However, he said air and water samples taken by his agency during the weekend, showed "everything was normal."

"We have a network set up around there so that any rise (in radiation) that would occur, we would immediately know it," he said.

The water flooded the floor of Unit 1 at Arkansas Nuclear One but was contained within the building, officials of Arkansas Power and Light said.

A spokesman said the company was in no hurry to begin the process, which could take 3 weeks.

Oui or non: ad firms making their fortunes

By INA WARREN

MONTREAL (CP) — From strippers' bikinis to the backside of Montreal city buses, there's no escaping the barrage of advertising promoting the yes and no options in the Quebec referendum campaign.

The main message is Oui or Non, Merci — as the no side politely puts it. One of the two can be found nearly everywhere these days, whether it's on the opinionated blue or red buttons on many lapels or on the thousands of banners decking porches and apartment balconies throughout the province.

As well, they are a constant ingredient in Quebecers' daily reading and their radio and television fare.

In this final week of campaigning before the May 20 vote, the media are devoting even more time and space to referendum coverage and free-time programs will continue on all television networks.

TV saturated

Thirty-second television commercials prepared by both sides are shown several times a day on the private TVA network and Radio-Quebec, the provincially-operated educational network. But the CBC and Radio-Canada, the French-language CBC, are not exposing their viewers to the commercials because of a policy decision not to accept referendum advertising.

Supplementing the no side's advertising is a sudden blitz of promotional messages in all the media from the federal government on everything from pension supplements to senior citizens to the beauty of a Canadian vacation. "So much to stay for," says the gentle voice at the end of one tourism ad which appears frequently.

This onslaught of advertising by Ottawa — in both English and French — has attracted the attention of Quebec's director-general of political party financing who said Friday that charges will be laid against the federal government.

Spending during the official referendum campaign period is strictly limited and all advertising must be authorized by either the yes or no committee. Ottawa did not receive such authorization because it maintained that the extensive advertising campaign was not intended to influence the referendum outcome.

While media coverage of Premier Rene Levesque and Quebec Liberal Leader Claude Ryan has shown the two leaders' increasing flair for strident rhetoric, their official advertising campaigns use a gentlemanly, kid-glove approach to get across their message.

The toughest commercial in the campaign so far was an early one from the no side which showed a hand cutting Quebec from a map of Canada and then botching the job of trying to tape it back together again.

A soft male voice urged Quebecers to "think about it — a yes vote will cut Quebec off." The commercial was memorable for its deft use of sound effects — the grating snip, snip, snip of the scissors and the raw, ripping sound of the tape.

"Now we don't want to be so negative," conceded a spokesman in the no headquarters. "We want to positivize the no."

While the no side has relied on strong visual messages for its 30-second spots, the yes camp has the stars on its side — Jean Duceppe, the grand old man of Quebec theatre with his shock of gray hair and twinkling blue eyes, and strawberry blonde Dominique Michel, the Carol Burnett of Quebec television whose show Dominique is watched by more than 2.3 million Quebecers every week.

Stars on for free

The no side is saving their stars, such as political types like former Quebec premier Jean Lesage, for their free-time television shows.

Under referendum law, both sides are limited in their campaign spending to a total of $2.1 million or 50 cents for each of the province's 4.2 million voters.

The yes group is spending $800,000 on its advertising campaign but the no side is being tight-lipped about the breakdown of its budget. Both have spent a good slice of that money buying television time which can cost upwards of $1,000 for a 30-second spot during prime time.

Quebec plates arouse tire slasher in Calgary

CALGARY (CP) — It was a brand of Western hospitality David Allen, an anglophone from Quebec, didn't expect.

Allen, who moved to Calgary a month ago, Saturday found all four tires on his car slashed and the words "Go Home Frog" painted on his car.

His still has a Quebec licence plate and that, he said, apparently provoked the vandalism.

Allen could only shake his head when asked about the incident. He works as a mechanic at the other end of the city and needs the car, but as one just settling in Calgary he didn't have too much money.

But Allen said the incident will not affect his plans to stay in Calgary. He said his licence plate also brought jeers from people while he was driving in Calgary and earlier in Ontario.

Princess film row peaks tonight

By TOM JORY

NEW YORK (AP) — Is Death of a Princess "a completely false picture of the life, religion, customs and traditions of Saudi Arabia," as that country's government claims, or is the film "a sensitive and thoughtful exploration of the Arab dilemma," as its producers maintain?

The Public Broadcasting Service insists the right to answer that question belongs to the viewer and will show Death of a Princess tonight (Ch.9 at 8 p.m.) despite pressure from the U.S. state department and one of the system's major underwriters, the Mobil Corp.

One consequence already is clear: Death of a Princess has affected U.S. relations with a foreign government like no previous television production.

PBS will follow the two-hour film with a six-minute documentary on the controversy, as well as an hour-long panel discussion on the issues raised by the film.

The film is about Saudi Arabian Princess Mish'al and her commoner lover who were publicly executed on July 15, 1977, in a parking lot in Jidda. The 19-year-old princess was shot to death and her companion hacked with a sword.

They had been accused of adultery, and the execution was ordered by the princess' grandfather, a powerful member of the royal family. The princess was given an opportunity to deny the adultery, but refused to do so.

British film-maker Antony Thomas learned of the execution four months later during an after-dinner conversation. He was intrigued and initially considered a dramatization based on the execution.

After several months' work in England and the Middle East, Thomas decided to produce instead a film detailing his search for facts behind the sensational story.

Actors were hired to portray Thomas, who is called Christopher Ryder in the film, the princess and other figures. Thomas said all interviews were faithfully transcribed for the film and all facts were checked several times.

After the film was broadcast April 10 in England, Saudi Arabia expelled Britain's ambassador. As the date for the PBS presentation approached, the Saudis expressed their concern in a letter to Warren Christopher, acting U.S. state secretary.

Christopher passed the communication on to Lawrence Grossman, PBS' president, urging the non-commercial, government-supported network "give appropriate consideration to the sensitive religious and cultural issues involved."

Mobil, which will spend nearly $2.5 million on programs for public television in 1980, entered the controversy with an advertisement in several major newspapers suggesting PBS "review its decision to run the film." Mobil is one of four owners of Arabian American Oil Co., which produces nearly 75 per cent of Saudi Arabia's daily output.

Death of a Princess scene

Brigade ambushes police foe

VENICE (Reuter) — The chief of the Venice anti-terrorist squad was ambushed and fatally shot on his way to work today and the Red Brigade urban guerrilla group later claimed responsibility.

Alfredo Albanese, 33, was gunned down by at least two people who fired more than 15 shots after stopping his car at a street crossing, police said.

Hit in the head, stomach and legs, Albanese died minutes later in a hospital. He was the 21st victim of urban guerrilla violence in Italy this year.

Two hours after the attack, an anonymous telephone caller told the Venice daily Il Gazzettino: "Red Brigades speaking, we take responsibility for the ambush of the Digos chief."

Today's killing, the first in almost two months, shattered police hopes that their recent raids and arrests had broken the spine of Italy's vast urban guerrilla network.

Fire rages at Kitimat

Times New Services

Ironically, the fuel was earmarked for Eurocan Pulp and Paper Company's firefighting equipment.

Larry Beitz, the company's industrial relations supervisor, told the Times the fuel was ignited by shortcircuited electrical wiring in the pumphouse.

The unidentified ship, accompanied by a tug, was being escorted into the deep-sea port 120 kilometres southeast of Prince Rupert when the mishap occurred.

The ship stayed to help fight the blaze when the lumber facing of the 300-foot-long dock caught fire, Beitz said.

But flames soon enveloped the whole dock and forced the freighter to retreat.

Extent of damage to the ship was not known.

More than 40 professional and volunteer firefighters, the company's own fire crews as well as loggers brought in from the woods, were battling the blaze in a bid to save an adjacent warehouse, Beitz said.

Other facilities on and near the dock include fuel tanks and a log dump. The mill, four or five kilometres away, was not in danger.

No injuries were reported.

Prime rate cut

NEW YORK (AP) — Several U.S. banks cut their prime lending rates to 16½ per cent today and a Cleveland bank cut its rate to 16 per cent as a slide in American interest rates continued.

Ameritrust, the Cleveland bank, was the first to drop to the 16-per-cent rate.

That came after Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., the fifth-largest U.S. bank, cut its rate to 16½ per cent from 17½ per cent, marking the fourth time Morgan has been the first to adopt a new rate since American banks began cutting their lending rates in mid-April from a peak of 20 per cent.

Federal tax on export gas price of island pipe cash?

By JAKE BANKY

British Columbia is facing a two-edged proposition from the federal government.

If it wants federal aid for a natural gas pipeline to Vancouver Island, it may have to put up with federal taxation of its natural gas exports.

The pipeline and the possible export tax figured prominently in today's discussions between federal Energy Minister Marc Lalonde and B.C. Energy Minister Bob McClelland.

Lalonde is on a round-robin of provincial visits trying to nail down a federal-provincial energy pricing agreement to replace the one which expires July 1. He meets the Alberta energy minister Tuesday.

McClelland told a joint press conference following the meeting B.C. remains as firmly opposed as ever to a federal tax on gas exports.

He refused to discuss the possibility B.C. might have to trade that position in order to get federal aid for the pipeline.

"It is not an either-or proposition. It's a package," he said.

But McClelland would not reveal the components of the package under discussion.

Lalonde said the federal government approves of the gas pipeline and would like to contribute to the project but it is broke.

If the necessary money is not forthcoming in a new oil pricing agreement with Alberta, it must come from somewhere else, he said.

"It's not a double-edged threat," Lalonde said. "But I'm telling you we've got a $14 billion deficit. We have no money, period, to do anything more than we're doing at the present time.

"There are quite valid new steps to be taken in this country to move away from oil consumption. We would like to contribute and participate in those steps that might be taken by some provincial governments. But in order to do that, we need funds."

Like McClelland, Lalonde would not be pinned down on the options being discussed.

Times News Services

MONTREAL — B.C.'s Premier Bill Bennett came under attack today by the Federation des Francophones hors Quebec following his address to the Montreal Board of Trade.

Bennett had defended his decision to take part in the constitutional debate in Quebec just days before the referendum by saying "the actions of each member of the Canadian family affect all the other members."

But the federation, an Ottawa-based group fighting for the rights of French-speaking minorities, accused Bennett and other premiers of issuing little more than a plea for the status quo.

"When they're in Quebec," the group said in a written statement, "the premiers of the English-speaking provinces place a great deal of emphasis on economic questions related to the referendum.

"This allows them to avoid the fundamental debate about the principle of two founding peoples and their equal status in any new constitution."

The statement said Quebec has already made a formal commitment to respect the rights of anglophones in that province and that "by refusing to make similar commitments to their French-speaking communities, Mr. Bennett and most of the other provincial premiers are losing all sense of credibility in the current debate about a renewed consitution."

In his speech, Bennett said he was proud of the progress made in B.C. in French-language education.

Bennett said his province is ready to push ahead with constitutional change within Canada and hopes Quebec will do the same.

"National policy-making on issues which affect the provinces is not the private

Balloonists cross North America

MATANE, Que. (UPI) — A father-son team plopped their balloon Kitty Hawk into the virgin wilderness of Quebec's Gaspe Peninsula Monday, completing a record, cross-continent odyssey that now has them looking to the frontiers of space.

Maxi Anderson, 48, of Albuquerque, N.M., and his son, Kris, 23, set down the 75-foot-tall helium balloon on a small dot of meadow in dense timberland two miles south of Ste. Felicite on the St. Lawrence River. A Canadian military helicopter blew the balloon away from the trees.

About 14 feet above ground, Kris detonated an explosive to separate the gondola and the bag. The Andersons fell unhurt to the ground but the bag was shredded by trees.

On the five-day, 2,800-mile journey from San Francisco, the adventurers suffered through unbearably cold temperatures and snow that iced the balloon, braved thunderstorms over Wyoming and desperately fought winds trying to carry them far north.

Despite being more than 1,000 miles from their original destination of Kitty Hawk., N.C., Anderson deemed it as great a success as his historic 1978 flight on the Double Eagle Two across the Atlantic from the United States to France.

Having conquered land and water, Anderson now has another dream that will carry him beyond Earth's confines.

"Man always has his dreams and I guess the one that I have ... is to lead the first mining expedition into space a few years from now,' he said after landing. "Man usually follows where he goes to search for raw materials. Canadians and Americans know that."

Anderson and his son knew Sunday they would never reach their destination at Kitty Hawk, where Wilbur and Orville Wright carried out the first successful heavier-than-air plane flight.

The pair hadn't eaten for two days because of air sickness. The 5 degree below zero temperatures were almost unbearable.

Maxi Anderson complimented the Canadian pilots for their "beautiful flying" and air traffic controllers for their help in plotting a course. "I had some of the finest help a man could have here — unselfish, eager and competent."

In case you're wondering

Nature takes care of raccoons

As we have raccoons living in a tree in our garden, I have often wondered what happens to them when they die. Can you tell me?

There was at least one prominent theologian centuries ago who argued that animals who died went to an animal heaven.

Interestingly, Wayne Campbell, assistant curator of vertebrate zoology at the Provincial Museum, says his department receives dozens of calls from people wanting to know what happens to wild animals when they die.

Campbell says very few animals live longer than a year as they usually fall victim to a predator or some kind of accident. Any raccoon that does live to a ripe old age and is ready to die simply curls up under a convenient tree and dies. Insects, crows, ravens, bears, cougars — the list of nature's disposal specialists is long — soon dispose of the remains.

Primates (monkeys, gorillas and that most ferocious of creatures, man) usually care for their aged until they die of disease or old age.

Although few wild creatures live beyond their first year of life, there's always one that refuses to cash in his chips.

Through banding of birds while they're still in a nest, zoologists know there is a 27-year-old seagull.

By DEREK SIDENIUS

An elite corps of police officers from across Canada will head to Ottawa in June for special training in investigation of computer crimes.

Twenty officers are slated to attend the one-month course, the first of its kind, at the Canadian Police College.

Three will be from B.C. including two members of the RCMP commercial crime sections in Victoria and Vancouver and one member of the Vancouver City police force. Names of the B.C. participants have not been announced.

Another course will be offered in the fall and three more are planned next year.

Cpl. Jim Mann of the Vancouver RCMP commercial crime section said knowledge of computer sciences is becoming more important in investigating white collar crime.

Mann is one of only three members of the 3,800-member RCMP contingent in B.C. fully trained for investigative purposes. He has a degree in computer sciences from the University of Alberta.

One of the other two officers, a recent recruit, has been attached to the patrol division but is soon to be transfered to a commercial crime unit. The third works in the RCMP intelligence section.

Police have no idea the extent of computer frauds in Canada but judging by the number of cases being reported in the United States, Mann said it is obvious that if there aren't problems now, there will be in future.

He said computer companies have been loath to report cases for fear of the bad publicity and loss of confidence that may result.

"They don't want to advertise the fact they are vulnerable," he said.

"If a problem is detected they will try to deal with the situation in other ways."

Mann, who will be in Victoria Wednesday to talk about computer crimes to delegates attending the third annual conference of the Canadian Information Processing Society, said there isn't a computer system on the market that is completely foolproof.

"Most systems can be penetrated with the right expertise," he said.

In the past three years only a handful of cases have come to police attention in B.C.

One, in 1977, involved a University of British Columbia professor charged with unauthorized use of a National Research Council computer. The case is still before the courts.

Another the following year resulted in the conviction of a person for illegally using the computer at Simon Fraser University.

Mann described the person, a non-student, as a "computerholic" who learned the secret passwords by looking over the shoulders of computer operators. He would then return and spend hours searching through university files before he was finally caught.

Last year an employee of a credit union in Merritt was convicted of stealing money by transferring deposits to her account in the bank's computer system.

An employee of a trust firm tried the same trick but was discovered when he attempted to set up a separate account for his ill-gotten gains. The computer wasn't programmed to accept deposits in such a manner.

Mann said the earliest computer crimes were amazingly simple — a person punching a repeat button and getting 200 cheques printed out or someone replacing blank deposit slips with his or her own account number on the bottom.

"With the rapid computerization people overlooked the simple things that could be done."

Financial institutions have become wise to some of the shortcomings and refined their systems. But crooks have simply become more sophisticated.

Mann said the problem has spawned a whole new industry — computer security.

Most major users now have data security officers and security consultant firms are beginning to spring up across North America. Safeguards are greatest Nowhere is the security in highly sensitive areas such as national security and defence.

Mann said the U.S. military, for example, now has select teams of computer whizzes whose sole job is to try to find cracks in the system.

As fas as Mann is concerned there will always be cracks. It will just be tougher finding them.

Radar okayed for Pat Bay

The federal government has approved installation of radar at Victoria International Airport but the news hasn't been made official yet.

A spokesman for the airport said today his office hasn't yet heard the word from Ottawa and only knows what's contained in the brief news reports from the east.

Transport Minister Jean-Luc Pepin told the House of Commons today that approval had been given to install radar at the aiport.

He was responding to questions from Progressive Conservative Don Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich). Pepin gave no further details.

Munro suggested the minister wasn't aware of the lack of radar at the airport. Pepin replied that Munro might be well informed about Victoria but probably doesn't know what is happening at other airports.

Boaters run into trouble

There were 25 breakdowns, 23 of them pleasure craft, the remainder fishing vessels.

The 26-foot pleasure craft One Wish caught fire at the Iona Jetty in the north arm of the Fraser River. The fire was put out by a Canadian Coast Guard hovercraft. Two people aboard were unharmed. The Canadian Marine Rescue vessel Monsoon towed the One Wish to Delta.

Woman survives truck flip

Deborah Horne, 35 Obed, was treated for minor face cuts after the truck she was driving overturned at Gorge and Washington Sunday at 9:13 p.m.

City police said the truck westbound on Gorge mounted a curb, glanced off a tree, sheared off a telephone pole and smashed a traffic light standard before coming to rest on its roof.

Police said the driver lost control as the truck approached the intersection and when it struck the curb part of its steering and underframe were ripped out.

Second Island Highway ruled out by Fraser

Highways Minister Alex Fraser today ruled out construction of a second Island Highway from Duncan to Campbell River.

The proposal was made on the weekend by delegates to the annual meeting of the Association of Vancouver Island Municipalities (AVIM).

They cited increasing traffic congestion on the highway since the new northern section to Port Hardy opened last year and heavy trucking activity on the southern portion.

The motion from Campbell River municipal council, which was endorsed by the AVIM plenary session, also noted that the majority of Island communities don't want any major upgrading of the Island Highway through their towns.

However, Fraser said twinning the Island Highway is not feasible. The section between Duncan and Nanaimo has already been four-laned and is adequate for traffic volumes, he said.

He also pointed out that a $100,000 study is under way into the feasibility of a bypass around Nanaimo. The minister calls the present section of highway through downtown Nanaimo "the biggest bottleneck in the province."

Mayor Frank Ney of Nanaimo said the proposal was new to him. Nanaimo city council's lobbying has mainly been in the area of a bypass.

Ney said the highways department has indicated it will go ahead on the bypass project, estimated to cost $30 million and to take 10 years to complete, but a route has yet to be chosen. Twice the city has made proposals but residents in the vicinity have protested loudly.

In the meantime, he said Nanaimo city itself will probably go ahead with a "a sort of mini-bypass" by widening Bowen Road for about $6 million.

AVIM president Mel Couvelier, mayor of Saanich, said the majority of Island communities through which the highway now passes endorsed the resolution, except the city of Nanaimo.

Nanaimo remained neutral but the Nanaimo Regional District is backing the concept, he said.

Fraser said the highway has been widened to four lanes as far as Parksville and he hopes to continue widening it north to Courtenay, but after that he feels it would be impossible.

Another $100,000 study is under way to find a new inland route from Courtenay to Campbell River. The present highway between the two communities is "the most congested piece of highway in B.C.," he said.

Fraser said the biggest problem with the AVIM proposal is land acquisition. His department spent $20 million last year just on buying property for new highway rights of way. Sometimes the government has to buy up entire businesses.

The minister said similar problems exist with the Sunshine Coast transport corridor proposed during the weekend by Ian Sherwin, president of the Victoria Social Credit constituency association.

It conflicts with the floating bridge-tunnel concept promoted by Science Minister Pat McGeer and Vancouver Island residents probably wouldn't permit it.

A series of bridges and tunnels woud link the Lower Mainland with the Campbell River area, opening hundreds of square miles of developable, non-agricultural land for housing and industry.

Public say on centre

Now is the time for all good citizens to learn about the waterfront convention centre.

If you have a beef or a compliment the next three days will provide the forum.

The Provincial Capital Commission is staging an information exhibit in the McPherson theatre foyer which runs from today until Wednesday.

The showing of scale models, conceptual drawings and detailed presentation drawings began at noon today and runs to 9 p.m. The same schedule is in effect the other two days.

On hand to answer questions will be representatives of the commission, which is building the $8 million centre, and officials of the Vancouver architectural firm of Merrick Chandler Kennedy which designed the project.

PCC manager Ken Patton said today there will be a large-scale model showing the proposed centre in greater detail than the first model shown to city council in March. It will depict the materials to be used in construction.

As well, there will be a colored rendering of the design in perspective showing the relationship between the centre and the surrounding buildings on Wharf, Patton added.

Citizens will also be able to fill in cards with their written comments on the centre.

The commission announced the forum after controversy broke out when the first detailed plans of the convention centre were presented to Victoria city council in March.

Former mayor Peter Pollen, Ald. Robin Blencoe and a number of citizen activists have criticized the design as well as the use of the three-acre site on Wharf at the foot of Fort.

Reserve tickets on sale for jetfoil run

Tickets went on sale in Seattle today and go on sale in Victoria Tuesday for Friday's inaugural runs of jetfoil service between the two cities.

The jetfoil makes its first departure from Seattle at 6 a.m. Friday, arriving here at 8. At 8:30 a.m. the first trip leaves Victoria for Seattle, arriving two hours later.

The jetfoil will continue the same schedule daily, leaving Seattle at 6 a.m. and 4 p.m. and leaving Victoria at 8:30 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. There will be an additional mid-day trip in each direction in the peak summer period.

All tickets are on a reserve basis although walk-on passengers will be accepted when space is available.

Flying Princess Transportation Co. president Pat Crofton said he expected the majority of passengers will travel on a reserved-seat basis.

"Starting Tuesday it will be possible to reserve for any trip, even as late as September. But the ticket must be paid for and collected to confirm the reservation."

Reservations are made through participating travel agents or at the office of the B.C. Steamship Co., 390 Belleville, which operates the Victoria Princess, formerly the Queen of Prince Rupert. The ferry will also operate on a reserved-seat basis.

Jetfoil fares from Victoria, all in Canadian funds, are $25 one way and $40 return for adults; $15 one way and $24 return for senior citizens, and one-half the adult fare for children 2 to 11. Children under 2 travel free on the jetfoil.

Fares on the Victoria Princess are $15 Canadian one way and $25 return for adults; $8 one way and $13 return for senior citizens, and free for children under 5.

It will be possible to travel one way on the Victoria Princess and the other by jetfoil under special combination fares of $35 for adults and $21 for senior citizens.

The Victoria Princess will make one round trip daily from May 16 to June 22, two round trips a day from June 23 to Sept. 1 and one round trip a day from Sept. 2 to Oct. 6. However, she will make only one return trip on Tuesday during the June 23-Sept. 1 period in order to allow time to meet safety drill requirements.

7:30 a.m., leave Seattle, arriving in Victoria at noon.

6 p.m., leave Victoria, arriving in Seattle at 10:30 p.m.

Daily schedule from June 23 to Sept. 1, except Tuesdays:

7:30 a.m., leave Seattle, arriving in Victoria at noon.

12:30 p.m., leave Victoria, arriving in Seattle at 5 p.m..

6 p.m., leave Seattle, arriving in Victoria at 10:30 p.m.

11 p.m., leave Victoria, arriving in Seattle at 6:15 a.m.

Daily schedule from Sept. 2 to Oct. 6 is the same as the May 16-June 22 schedule.

A lunch and champagne flight on the jetfoil will be held Thursday for local dignitaries and the media.

The Thursday events begin at 11:30 a.m. when 100 Seattle officials arrive on the jetfoil and join five B.C. cabinet ministers and local government representatives for a lunch on board the Victoria Princess.

About 2 p.m. the officials and newsmen will board the jetfoil for a one-hour test run in the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

At 4 p.m. the jetfoil will head for Seattle for servicing at Boeing in preparation for its first regularly scheduled run.

Time Air for sale at $10.5M

CALGARY (CP) — Time Air president Stubb Ross of Lethbridge said today his airline is up for sale with a price tag of $10.5 million.

A Red Deer real estate firm specializing in the selling of companies has undertaken the task of testing the market to see if any buyers are available.

Ross said in a telephone interview that the real estate firm approached him about putting the airline up for sale.

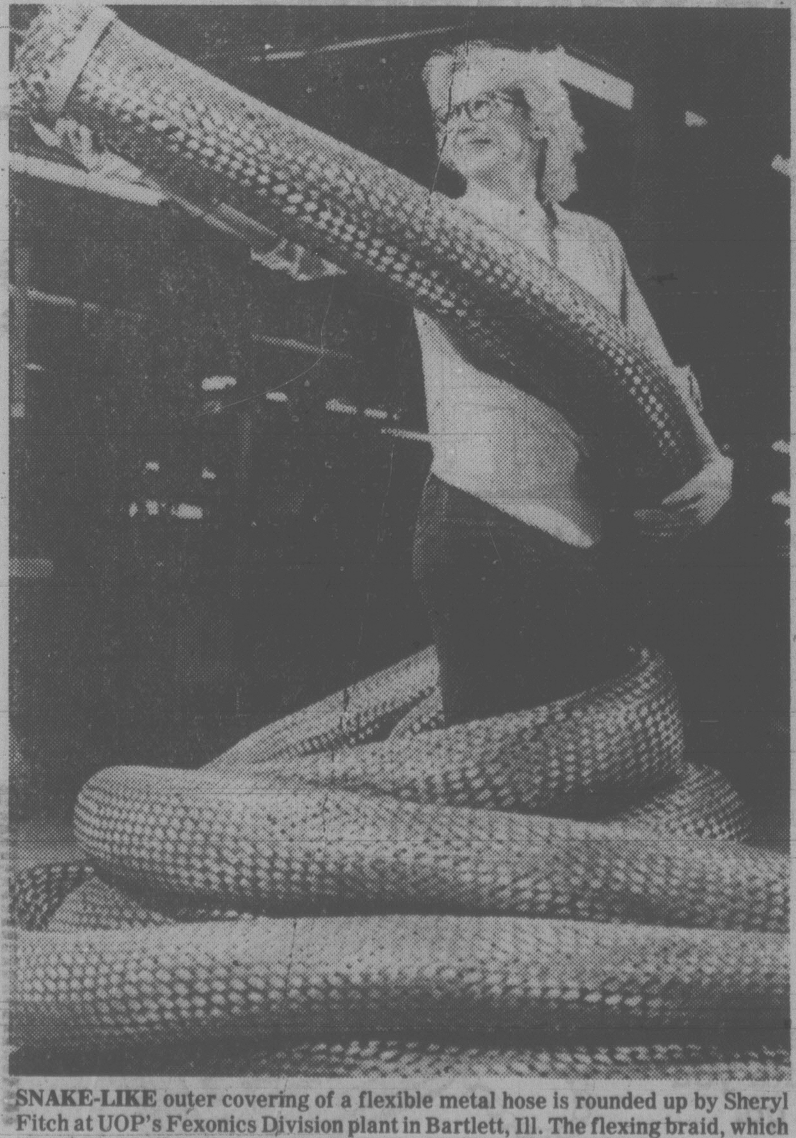
Ross, who has 100-percent control of the airline, said he decided to sell because of difficulty in raising capital to fund the airline's future expansion.

Among those growth plans are applying for permanent authority to fly certain routes once held by Northward Airlines Ltd. of Edmonton, which now is in bankruptcy. It also involves signing a letter of intent for four De Havilland Dash 8 aircraft which are still in the design stage. Total purchase price is $17.4 million.

As well, Time Air plans to take delivery of its first Dash 7 at the end of May and a second 52-passenger aircraft at the end of August. By then, Time expects it will have authority from the air transport committee in Ottawa to operate the four turbo-prop powered aircraft on its Alberta services.

The Dash 8 is a twin-engine commuter aircraft capable of carrying 30 to 36 passengers.

Time's letter of intent asks for delivery of three Dash 8s in 1985 and one more in 1986 at a price of $4.35 million each.



SNAKE-LIKE outer covering of a flexible metal hose is rounded up by Sheryl Fitch at UOP's Fexonics Division plant in Bartlett, Ill. The flexing braid, which sheathes a bellows-type carrier for liquids and gases, protects the bellows convolution and increases the pressure-carrying capacity by restricting elongation. Chemical and energy industries use these hose assemblies because of their pressure, temperature and corrosion resistance.

Conoco makes oil strike in Alaska

NEW YORK (AP) — Conoco Inc. said Tuesday it has made an oil discovery 400 miles north of Fairbanks on the North Slope of Alaska, but has abandoned efforts at another site about 16 kilometres away.

The nation's ninth-largest oil company said a test well at Milne Point in the Prudhoe Bay area yielded oil at a rate of 785 to 1,340 barrels a day.

Conoco said additional drilling will be conducted after the summer "to evaluate the potential" of the site as a commercial oilfield.

Conoco said it was unsuccessful in finding oil in a well at nearby Gwydyr Bay. The well was drilled to a depth of about 3,700 metres at a cost of as much as $5 million before the effort was given up, the company said.

Costs of the Milne Point find "may be in excess of $8 million," Conoco said.

Conoco's partners at Milne Point are Champlin Petroleum Co., Cities Service Co., Hamilton Brothers Petroleum Corp., Hamilton International Oil Co. and Reading Bates Petroleum Co. The Hamilton companies and Reading Bates were partners with Conoco in the Gwydyr Bay project.
